Harrison Would Retain Present System, Add Surtax on Surplus.

President Allows Houses Free Rein

Calls Revenue the Only Requisite; Oliphant Severely Grilled.

By Robert C. Albright.

An Administration retreat from the hard and fast undistributed earnings tax provisions of the House revenue bill was in full progress yesterday as the President in effect again told Congress to write its own tax bill and the Senate Finance Committee leadership put forward a basis for compromise.

The new substitute proposal was suggested by Chairman Pat Harrison after his committee predominantly hostile to the Administration tax bill as passed by the House, had subjected Treasury experts attempting defense of the measure to such a relentless grilling as has seldom been heard on Capitol Hill. A "simplified" revision of the corporate tax formula was offered the committee by Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel.

Earlier, Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had written a letter to the committee advising substantial tax concessions be made "that would encourage modernization, new plant construction and new buildings to replace old ones, new equipment for railroads and industry of all kinds, including allowances for new debts created for these purposes."

Wallace Asks "Windfall" Levy.

Another New Deal chieftan, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, spent an entire morning before the committee requesting some $220,564,000 in new processing taxes on a long list of agricultural commodities, including sugar. Wallace defended the proposed 80 per cent "windfall" levy on processing tax refunds, asked revision, asked legislation to protect nearly $1,000,000,000 in processing taxes already collected, and urged repeal of AAA provisions invalidated by the Supreme Court, but re-enactment of other sections.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., will appear before the committee today to supply 1935 earnings data on large corporations, which, Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, contends would pay little or no tax under the pending bill. The Treasury Secretary's testimony, it was predicted, would attempt to show that dividends paid out by these large corporations find their way in large measure into the hands of interlocking and affiliated companies, and would there be reached by the bill.

The rebellion in the ranks of the Finance Committee flared into the open hearings record for the first time late yesterday, when members raked Oliphant's defense with a cross-fire of questions that left the counsel and his aids frequently at a loss for words.

Asks Revenue Estimates.

It was at the close of this hammering examination that Chairman Harrison asked the Treasury to supply him with estimates of revenue yield on what observers believe is the projected basis for compromise.

Following largely the lines of the original undistributed earnings tax plan of the late Senator Andrieus Jones, of New Mexico, the proposal contemplates retention of substantially the present corporation income tax, with graduated surtaxes superimposed on undistributed earnings.

As roughly outlined by Harrison, it would levy a 15 per cent corporation income tax on all corporations, but companies retaining 30 per cent, and less, of earnings, would not be subjected to the proposed additional "super tax."

Surtax Up to 45 Per Cent.

The surtaxes would start on all earnings in excess of 30 per cent withheld from dividends. For example, a company withholding 35 per cent of earnings, would be asked to pay an additional tax of 5 per cent, which, when combined with the income tax, would bring their total rate to 20 per cent. The scale would range upward to a surtax of 45 per cent (or a total of 60 per cent), on all corporations

By Agnes E. Meyer

Mrs. Meyer has been chairman of the Westchester County Recreation Commission for the past 13 years.

It is alarming to see Congress supinely voting the President another billion and a half for the continuance of the most ruthless political machine that has ever existed in our country. We have witnessed extreme political corruption before, but it was confined to a municipality, a Government department, or even a State. Never before have we had a national organization reaching out into the highways and byways and debauching the people as a whole. I shall endeavor to prove in these articles that the prime object of some of the WPA officials in Westchester County, N. Y., if not in other communities, is to buy allegiance to the national administration, to intimidate as far as possible those whose vote cannot be bought and only lastly, to spend on relief cases such sums as are left when the previous objectives have been attained.

Mr. John Buckley Bryan, regional director of WPA in Westchester County, N. Y., has frankly confessed to the first purpose before innumerable people. He has made the following statement to one of my friends on three separate occasions: "Franklin D. Roosevelt is the man who gave us this money and I would be the dirtiest kind of a dog-traitor if I didn't see to it that people who are 100 per cent for him receive the first consideration." The very fact that an American official entrusted with public funds could openly subscribe to such procedure is an indication of the serious extent to which the New Deal has warped the minds of some persons.

Hungry Clamor For Overdue Pay.

On the afternoon of Saturday, April 25, I was completing the day's work in the offices of the Westchester County Recreation Commission of which I have been chairman for thirteen years. Our offices are on the second floor of the County Office Building in White Plains, the county seat. An ever increasing rumble of men's voices that sounded like the sad choruses of Boris Godunov drew me toward the window and there below me in the parking space some two or three hundred people were slowly milling toward the basement door. It was only too clear to me what that ill-clad, pathetic assemblage meant. They had come to the WPA offices to demand their pay, then a month to six weeks overdue. Many of them had walked weary miles from every section of the county because their credit was exhausted, their families hungry, their rent, heat and light bills long in arrears. Had I not, myself, only the day before, been struggling with the local officials of the WPA to secure the wages of the WPA relief workers temporarily attached to our recreation staff? I knew that their quest was as vain as my own efforts had been and I turned away from the window, angry and ashamed to think that for the first time in the history of Westchester, county officials were powerless to help their fellow-citizens.

In explanation of this pay-roll situation Mr. R. C. Richards, Zone C supervisor for the WPA, had stated in our commission meeting that WPA accounts were so confused that the local Treasury disbursing office had been closed down until some kind of order could be restored. Checks, he added vaguely, might be forthcoming "some time next week." I had already made out checks against private funds for such men as WPA had assigned to us, who had children to feed. Other county officials and employes were doing the same thing. For this was not the first time since the WPA had invaded our county, that an army of desperate men had marched upon the central WPA office to demand their wages. In addition there had been parades of protest, strikes and other demonstrations the like of which our orderly county had never witnessed.

On this particular occasion the handling of the pay-roll situation was typical. During the week after the April 25 demonstration, checks began to dribble through and on Thursday Mr. Bryan announced that all workers had been paid. The result was another outpouring of unpaid men, angry and even desperate, of whom Mr. Bryan's office seemed to have no record, for otherwise why put out such a statement?

WPA Is Weapon of Intimidation.

If I now attempt to write the story of WPA in Westchester County, it is because the usual power of local government in the United States to care for its citizens has crumbled before the chaos, the inefficiency, and the autocratic tyranny of this Federal monstrosity.

What the country does not realize is that WPA is primarily an Administration weapon ruthlessly used to intimidate the helpless and to destroy local government, a weapon that is bound to become a boomerang if there is a sense of freedom and justice left in the hearts of the American people. Several of our responsible county officials have expressed the fear that if I reveal the turpitude of WPA in Westchester, the Administration will "crack down" upon our relief workers. Well, we must cross that bridge when we come to it. But this oppressive atmosphere of terror of the Federal Government which demoralizes the relief workers and even the local officials is proof that we already have in this country a partial dictatorship. The Federal Administration is a government only for its friends and the rest of the country is frankly exploited for the benefit of these adherents. Whoever opposes the Administration is soon made to realize that he has in the present Government an active enemy.

The county of which I speak, begins where New York City ends and continues northward as far as Peekskill on the Hudson River, and on Long Island Sound as far as Port Chester. It has a population of 520,000 and contains such widely different communities as the densely populated manufacturing City of Yonkers with over 130,000 inhabitants, and toward its northern borders the extremely rural type of settlements, containing over a large acreage only a few thousand inhabitants. The old form of county government still prevails by which a board of 42 supervisors administers the common interests of 4 cities and 18 towns each having its own local government as well.

County Puts Public Good First.

Nevertheless this unwieldy instrument has been made to function so successfully that Westchester is known through the country and is not unknown abroad for its earnest effort and proven work in social welfare. This is largely due to the fact that its cumbersome machinery has been deftly used by able and honest officials and because innumerable private citizens have vied with each other to serve upon its public commissions and upon the boards of its semipublic civic and charitable organizations.

President Sends Naval Treaty To Senate; Approval Foreseen

By the Associated Press.

The naval treaty signed in London by the United States, Great Britain and France was sent to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt, and promptly was met by a prediction that it would be ratified at the present session of Congress.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, immediately set hearings on the pact for tomorrow, and forecast early approval.

Informed observers have known for several weeks that the President was conducting a canvas of the Senate to ascertain whether any insurmountable objections to the treaty existed, and his action yesterday was taken as an indication he had been assured of favorable action.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American delegation, and Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, who assisted in drafting the treaty in London, will be called before the committee for the "inside story" of the negotiations.

The pact would limit the size of certain types of ships without restricting their numbers, and provide for exchange of building program information between the signatories.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, has given advance notice of some opposition to the treaty in the Senate by designating it as "a Swiss cheese treaty" because, he asserted, "it is so full of holes."

The naval appropriation bill, now in conference, would appropriate $529,000,000 for naval maintenance and the construction of new ships intended to shove the Navy's strength toward the strength authorized in existing treaties.

It contains an authorization for the construction of two battleships—to replace obsolete vessels—in the event that other nations build new battleships. The British already have planned the construction of two such ships and it was assumed the Navy would take advantage of the authorization when and if their construction begins.

Meanwhile, Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, a "treaty strength" Navy advocate, yesterday was virtually assured of being the new chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, succeeding the

Borah Trails Taft Forces In Ohio Vote

Roosevelt Piles up Lead; Davey Also Is Ahead; Returns Meager.

Senator Neely Swamps Hiner, Backed by Holt in West Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 12.—Ohio's "favorite son" Presidetnial forces swept into a good lead late tonight in a primary Republican delegate fight with Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho.

State-wide voting put an entire slate of eight delegate-at-large candidates favoring Robert A. Taft, son of the late President, ahead of seven Borah delegate-at-large candidates on the basis of returns from 346 of the State's 8,579 precincts.

Three of Borah's 28 district delegate candidates were leading in two districts, but 21 "favorite son" district delegate candidates held leads in 10 contested districts.

Two contested districts were unreported, while in eight others Taft candidates were unopposed.

Roosevelt in Lead.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt swept into a commanding lead over his New Deal foe, Col. Henry Breckinridge, of New York, in the Democratic Presidential preferential race.

Davey polled 15,747 votes in 531 precincts, Congressman Stephen M. Young, of Cleveland, 11,681, and Charles H. Hubbell, of Cleveland, 922.

Leading the "favorite son" delegate-at-large slate was former Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati, with 8,412.

The lowest "favorite son" candidate was Frank M. Ransbottom, Zanesville industrialist, who placed eighth with 6,789, but was considerable ahead of the highest Borah candidate, Daniel E. Morgan, of Cleveland, who polled 4,373.

Heddleston Drops.

Russell C. Heddleston, of East Liverpool, a Borah delegate-at-large candidate, held a place among the first eighth for a short period, but dropped to eleventh on the basis of returns from the 348 precincts.

Trickling returns put three new leaders in the races for Congressman-at-large in both parties.

Lieut. Gov. Harold G. Mosier of Cleveland was the only Democratic candidate to retain the lead for one of two positions. He got 1,509 votes in 167 precincts.

Former Representative John McSweeney, of Wooster, replaced John W. Pattison, of Cincinnati, as leader for the other position with 1,471 votes to Pattison's 1,364.

M. Herbert Hoover, of Akron, with 937, and L. L. Marshall, of Euclid, with 934, took the lead from George H. Bender and Raymond J. Jeffreys, both of Cleveland, for the two Republican nominations.

President Roosevelt and Breckinridge were not contesting for delegates. The preference voting served merely as a test of Democratic sentiment.

Senator Neely Leading.

Charleston, W. Va., May 12 (AP).—A tabulation slowed almost to a standstill by an enormous ballot gave a long lead tonight to Senator M. M. Neely, battling for renomination after a spectacular campaign struggle with his Democratic colleague, Rush D. Holt.

The first 21 precincts of the 2,437 in West Virginia reported 2,147 votes for Neely and 379 for Ralph M. Hiner, who was backed by Senator Holt.

Four precincts in Holt's home county of Lewis voted 95 to 37 in favor of Neely.

President Roosevelt received 3,033 votes in 44 precincts reported. He was virtually assured of the Democratic choice. All candidates for delegate to the national convention were pledged to him.

In 44 precincts Senator William E. Borah was given 1,505 votes in the Republican Presidential preference primary. In one Mingo County precinct, where Borah received 65 votes, there were 63 "write-in" votes for Gov. Landon of Kansas, but the

Ely Fails to Halt Housing Project

Former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, counsel for a group of Boston property owners, lost in District Supreme Court yesterday his attempt to halt construction of a $8,000,000 PWA slum clearance low-cost housing project in South Boston.

Ely and Frank L. Peckham, local attorney, filed suit to restrain Secretary Ickes and his aids from advancing the project on the theory it would deprive their clients of a fair return on their investment. They contended it would be impossible to rent privately-owned tenements at a profit if the Government insisted upon building low-cost housing projects in the immediate vicinity of their clients' properties.

Justice Jennings Bailey denied the request for an injunction, saying that long before the Federal project is ready for renting, and before any damage can be done the property owners, there will be opportunity to complete the suit and decide the question on its merits.

French Pact Trade Aids Cited by Hull

Tariff Barriers of U. S. Lowered; France Lifts Restrictions Also.

First Commercial Treaty Between 2 Nations in 158 Years.

By Sidney Olson.

Details of the first commercial agreement between the United States and France in 158 years were released last night by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, with a statement hailing the reciprocal trade treaty signed May 6 by both nations as "a long onward stride."

United States tariff barriers were knocked down as much as 50 per cent, while France lifted long-standing restrictions against American goods.

Into France, fifth best customer of the United States, will flow American automobiles and many manufactured articles in larger quantities and at lower rates than before.

French markets will be open to greatly increased quanties of American fresh apples and pears, leaf tobacco, canned salmon, logs and lumber, silk hosiery, agricultural machinery, tractors, radios and refrigerating machinery.

The French also will cut duties on 19 articles, and will continue existing rates on a number of other articles.

Into the United States will move many French luxury products, with tariffs reduced as much as 50 per cent on brandy, lace, wines and perfumes.

30-Day Clause.

Significant in the long and complex agreement was the article briefly stipulating that either country can modify or terminate the agreement on 30 days' notice if the relative values of the currencies of the two countries shift so widely that either's industry or commerce would suffer.

Observers marked this passage as essential in view of the present uncertain political situation in France, and the general uncertainty over the future financial policies of the French government.

Secretary Hull added:

"I desire to express my deep gratification with the successful conclusion of long and difficult negotiations. Happily, the delays and difficulties arose not because of the existence of any divergence of view between the two countries as to the fundamental objectives which they seek to attain; rather, they have been the result of differences in the respective technical approaches of our two governments to the problem of regulating commercial relations."

The Secretary pointed to the unanimity of desire by the two countries to further the expansion of world trade and thus to re-establish "full and durable economic prosperity" and assure "political stability and world peace." He concluded:

"By placing their mutual trade upon such a basis, our two republics have given the world a vivid demonstration of their firm determination to go forward in a vital effort toward a liberalization of commercial relations everywhere. The trade agreement is thus far more than an instrument for creating a freer interchange of goods between our two countries.

Onward Stride.

"It represents a long onward stride in the development of the only type of policy that holds a promise, of extricating the world from the morass of economic distress and political instability into which it has been plunged by a short-sighted, futile and disastrous search for national self-sufficiency through the erection of excessive barriers to international trade."

The agreement signed by Secretary Hull and Ambassador Andre de Laboulaye a week ago today is particularly important, according to informed official sources, in the liberalizing of the present French quota export exclusion policy. The document, first commercial agreement between the two countries since the Treaty of Commerce and Amity signed in 1778, gives the United States the "most-favored-nation" treatment in the French market, meaning that this country gets as low tariff rates and as large import quotas as any other nation trading with France.

The treaty will remain in effect indefinitely, although either nation may terminate on six months' no-

Zioncheck in Row; Challenged to Duel

San Juan, P. R., May 12 (U.P.).—Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, Congressional "bad boy," here with his bride on their honeymoon, had a large day today and set a new personal record for getting into scrapes.

He not only damaged an automobile and a truck when he crashed the auto into the truck, but was the central figure of a near riot and was challenged to a duel.

The near riot and the challenge came after the accident, when Zioncheck tried to return a Negro, whom he had employed to go fishing with him, to the wrong house.

After smashing down the gate when the owner refused to permit the Negro to enter, Zioncheck found himself faced with a crowd of nearby cane cutters brandishing huge machetes and shouting loud "Vivas" for the "Puerto Rican Republic."

Il Duce to Isolate Italy From Rest of Europe Until League Lifts Ban

New Alliance Between Mussolini and Hitler Is Indicated.

Delegation Silent Following Recall

Council Adjourns Until June 15; Sanctions Will Continue.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, May 12.—A fresh effort to build up security for uneasy Europe crumbled tonight when the Italian delegation to the League of Nations brusquely bolted from Geneva at the imperative command of Premier Mussolini.

The Fascists walked out after the Council adopted a resolution which was virtually a new condemnation of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

Asserting it needed further time "to consider the situation," the Council adjourned until June 15. Sanctions, meantime, will continue against Italy.

Widespread pessimism also was based on the fact that the Italians boycotted a scheduled meeting of the remaining Locarno powers to act on Germany's renunciation of the treaty.

Mussolini was reported flirting with Adolf Hitler. Some saw the possibility of an alliance between the two dictators.

Conference Reported.

A reliable source here said a secret exchange of Italo-German views took place in Berlin yesterday and observers wondered if it was connected with the withdrawal today of the Italian delegates.

France was worried about the German Locarno problem.

The League was worried lest the departure of the Italians be followed by Italy's resignation from the League.

Orders for the Italian delegation to withdraw came from Rome. Baron Pompeo Aloisi, head of the Fascist delegation, announced his instructions to Dr. J. A. C. Avenol, secretary-geenral of the League. Aloisi had walked out of a private session of the Council yesterday, refusing to sit with the Ethiopian delegate, contending Ethiopia no longer has sovereignty but is Italian.

Leading members of the Council had drafted a resolution in effect condemning Italy. When Aloisi was shown a copy of it he called it "quite unacceptable to Italy." It was modified somewhat before the Council adopted it after Italy's departure.

Resolution Modified.

After learning that the Italians were leaving, the Council in a brief public session adopted this modified resolution:

"The council, having met to consider the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia, recalls the conclusion reached and the decisions taken in this matter by the League since October 3, 1935, is of the opinion that further time is necessary to permit the members to consider the situation created by the grave new steps taken by the Italian government, decides to resume its deliberations on the subject June 15, and considers that in the meantime there is no cause for modifying the measures (sanctions) previously adopted in collaboration by the members of the League."

When the Italians left they took with them the secret of what Il Duce's sudden "come home" orders meant.

To the last an Italian spokesman insisted, "We cannot comment on orders received from Il Duce. Our instructions were simply to come home."

In many League quarters it was Graziani had moved promptly to return the Harar region to normal, appointing special commissary chiefs for that city and Diredawa, on the Addis Ababa-Djibouti Railway.

The population was being dis-

Costello Quits As Democratic Committeeman

In Post 24 Years, He Won't Seek Re-election Despite Urging of Friends.

John F. Costello, the unassuming Irishman who has been Democratic national committeeman for the District for the last 24 years, tendered his resignation to the local party organization yesterday.

The resignation took the form of an announcement that he would not offer for re-election at the party primary on May 20. He could have been re-elected without serious opposition.

Malcolm S. McConihe, a resident of the District for the last third of a century, is expected to be elected. McConihe was born in New York, but has been in business in Washington for 33 years. He was a member of the District delegation to the Chicago Democratic Convention at which President Roosevelt was nominated. He was advanced by Costello for appointment as District Commissioner. The two are friends.

Feels He Could Win.

Costello announced his intention to withdraw over the protests of almost all of the leaders of the local Democratic organization. He had been indorsed almost unanimously at a meeting of the central committee last week. Representatives of 20 of the 22 local party districts attended the meeting and 19 of the 20 demanded Costello stand for re-election.

Unable to sway him from his decision to retire, some of his friends resorted to tactics which might induce him not to do so. They taunted him with suggestions that one or another of his political foes might beat him if he ran.

"I could lick the pants off anybody who might run against me and everybody knows it," Costello said.

Active 40 Years.

Announcement of his retirement was made on the eve of the last day for filing of candidacies for committeeman, delegates and alternates to the Democratic convention in Philadelphia in June. Notice of candidacy must be filed with the contral committee at 720 Fifth street northwest not later than 8:30 p. m. today.

No hint of any disgruntlement over his treatment by the Administration was given by Costello in his statement. Neither would he give any reply to questions designed to elicit such comment. His statement follows:

"I am retiring from the active leadership of the Democratic Party in the District of Columbia and shall not offer for re-election as national committeeman in the party

Formal Withdrawal Is Declared Possible; Eden Attacked.

Il Duce May Delay Breaking Up Army

'We Will Defend Our Empire to Last Man,' New Watchword.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 12.—The walkout of the Italian delegation at Geneva, an authoritative source indicated tonight, means that Italy will refuse to co-operate with the League of Nations until her annexation of Ethiopia is recognized.

This course, a high Fascist official, would not state explicitly the implied significance of the action except to say it was "very important."

Premier Mussolini plans to refuse any collaboration in European affairs, it was indicated, although he may not openly declare such a policy until the "Italian Empire" is recognized.

Withdrawal Possible.

"However, it is entirely possible that if the League persists in not recognizing Italy's point of view that the Ethiopian question no longer exists the further step of formal withdrawal may take place," he declared.

He asserted that Haile Selassie's delegate, Wolde Mariam, had been permitted to make remarks before the League Council which the Italian government considered offensive.

Other sources suggested that the League will be "shattered" and that Great Britain and Italy may be nearing a diplomatic parting of the ways.

Authoritative editorial comment on the Geneva situation said:

"The Italian delegation, in abandoning the council of the League with reference to questions which do not concern the Ethiopia case, intended to give explicit interpretation to the attitude assumed by the Geneva council toward Italy.

"In withdrawing provisionally from Geneva with the reservation of giving more definite character to her withdrawal, Italy is separating herself from that policy of European collaboration which Geneva would like to assume and is taking again full liberty of action in setting the course she will take in regard to her own special interests.

"The withdrawal of Italy does not signify the Rome government's abstention from European political activity.

"It signified only that this activity will be developed along lines of exclusively national interests with autonomous objectives and in a form which does not exclude collaboration with other European nations other than that kind of collaboration which suffered at Geneva with scant, practical results.

Autonomous Action.

"Naturally, as long as this situation lasts, Italian policy will be developed with autonomous action and with its new orientation, both political and economic, not only in Europe but in the entire world.

"The Italian government takes note of the attitude of those powers which today assume a character evidently hostile, a hostility which cannot be reconciled by any means with a policy of collective security."

Italy coined this new watchword tonight amid Fascist predictions that the League of Nations would collapse: "We shall defend our new empire to the last man; develop it to the last acre!"

Informed Fascists repeated the words after Baron Pompeo Aloisi and his colleagues departed, on Il Duce's sudden orders from Geneva.

Senator Roberto Forges-Davanzati, writing in La Tribuna, warned: "* * * Mr. Eden will carry out the policy he has carried on for about a year with a result that all can see. "The League will be shattered through the action, with the responsibility of all League members."

Elsewhere in Rome there were predictions from usually reliable sources that an Anglo-Italian diplomatic break would follow if British diplomats continued to "flourish the whip of sanctions."

Il Popolo d'Italia requoted Premier Mussolini's Saturday night declaration concerning the newborn empire of Italy and Ethiopia: that the Italian people will defend Aboard the Hindenburg en route to Frankfort-on-Main, May 12.—The Hindenburg was approximately 2,100 miles east of New York tonight, having covered more than half of the distance to her destination, Frankfort-on-Main, Germany.

The Hindenburg's officers expect to sail across London Wednesday midnight if the ship's present speed—aided by tail winds—persists.

She ran into fog early in the trip but climbed 1,500 feet above it and continued to make 70 knots.

The Hindenburg got out over the grand banks about 100 miles south of Cape Race at noon. Nobody on board feels like sleeping because of the excitement of sailing on the first commercial air flight from the United States to Europe.

The officers are confident the ship will have set a record for the eastern crossing of the Atlantic when it lands at Frankfort-on-Main, German.

Weather is perfect and the flight is being aided by tail winds at present.

The last land sighted was Canso, on the east coast of Nova Scotia. Before dawn today a supper was served, with Dr. Hugo Eckener as toastmaster. Water has not been a popular beverage so far.

When the Hindenburg sailed across New York early today the passengers could hear the welcoming sirens and read the time on the clocks in the big towers.

Everyone regarded the take-off at Lakehurst as almost perfect. It was shortly after midnight when the ship cruised over New York.

There was great excitement at Lakehurst, with 5,000 persons crowding into the naval air station to say farewell to the Hindenburg. The ship was cut loose from the mooring mast and free-ballooned into the air. After maneuvering for the wind she was headed toward New York.

Bill Demands State Control Of Aid Projects

Vandenberg Assails Present Setup in Submitting Relief Substitute.

By Felix Bruner.

Without waiting for committee consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill passed by the House with an allotment of $1,425,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration, the Senate yesterday plunged into the controversy over relief.

Two substitute bills and an amendment increasing the amount of the appropriation were introduced.

The substitute measures, turning administration of relief back to the states, were introduced by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania. The third measure, adding to the appropriation $700,000,000 for the Public Works Administration, was offered by Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona. Similar attempts to change the relief setup were defeated in the House.

In introducing his substitute, Senator Vandenberg charged political exploitation of relief. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority leader, replied that State administration of relief would involve more politics than the present system.

The Vendenberg bill would increase the appropriation to $1,500,000,000, the amount originally asked by President Roosevelt. To this it would add unexpended balances of relief funds which the Michigan Senator estimated at $1,800,000,000.

System Up to States.

The bill would set aside $100,000,000 to be allocated to the States to meet unforeseen emergencies. The remainder would be allocated to the States on the basis of relative population, relative unemployment, relative cost of living, and relative tax-paying resources. In addition the bill would require each State to set up a bi-partisan board of relief trustees as custodians of Federal grants-in-aid, and to match Federal grants by not less than 25 per cent of State and local funds.

Decision as to the type of relief and complete responsibility for subsequent administration would be turned over to the States. Relief discrimination on the basis of race, religion or politics would be penalized and assessment of relief workers for political purposes would be declared a crime.

Vandenberg declared his bill would "demobilize expensive and often scandalous Federal bureaucracy in this field, and ultimately will bring us in sight of a balanced budget which is a prerequisite to the substitution of real jobs for big or little doles."

Predicts Defeat of Bill.

"I have no illusions about the substitute's reception," he continued, referring to its almost certain defeat in the Senate. "Probably it is pre-ordained that the country shall persist, for one more year at least, in the reckless, wasteful, often corrupting and inadequate relief process which is the Administration's present infatuation."

Vandenberg said that under the substitute system no such huge sum would be needed as that for which the Administration has asked, stating that administration of relief now is costing an average of 11 per cent. He said the Administration's "disregard of the lessons of experience is proved by its purpose to concentrate on WPA and to abandon the more fruitful and infinitely cleaner PWA entirely."

The Michigan Senator referred repeatedly to the poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion, published in The Washington Post, showing that a majority of the people believe there is politics in relief and that a majority advocate return of its administration to the States.

Duplication Charged.

"The present relief system," he said, "invites the dangerous and ultimately fatal habit of quitting local self-reliance even as it destroyes local autonomy."

"It progressively encourages the process of central subsidies which have ruined every nation in history that has surrendered to their insidious and paralyzing influence. Thus it destroys morale and creates more problems than it solves."

Continuing his indictment of the present system, he charged that it involves expensive duplication of effort, spells poor business, wastes money on experimentation, suggests inequalities as between States, is exposed to political exploitation, is inadequate and results in a system under which "relief loads, relief costs and re-employment increase together."

Replying, Senator Robinson said that Vandenzerg's arguments were not sustained by sound reasons. He declared that there is less politics in administration of WPA than there was in the FERA, which was administered by States.

Hearing on Today.

"There would be more politics in the plan of the Senator from Michigan than there would be in the plan advanced in the House bill," he said, "but the politics in his plan would suit him better. It is unsound that the Government should pay most of the costs and then have no hand in the administration of funds."

He said it was significant "that none of the substitute plans calls for reducing the appropriation by $1."

A Senate Appropriations subcommittee will begin consideration of the bill today. Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, chairman of the sub-committee, said that Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, and Secretary Harold L. Ickes, PWA administrator, will be called before the committee. He said the hearings may end this week.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

ONCE again the Roosevelt Administration has marched up Capitol Hill with a tax bill—labeled as an urgent, necessary reform measure—and again, it appears the march down the hill has started, with the President allegedly washing his hands of the business and telling Congress to write its own bill, just so long as the revenue figure he sets is met.

WALTMAN

The Administration a year ago suddenly projected before the country its share-the-wealth tax reform bill, containing the new and untried inheritance tax and the steeply graduated levies on corporate earnings. But public opinion in the form of a barrage of criticism by experts outside of the Government service forced the abandonment of the first proposal and modification of the second.

And now the same amazing picture is being duplicated in regard to the proposal to levy exorbitant taxes on undistributed corporation earnings for the purpose of forcing their distribution. Even Administration figures are now joining in assailing the measure, making its rout the more ludicrous.

* * *

For instance, RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones, an astute business practitioner if ever there was one and one of the few New Deal officials who seems to understand the realities of business, is encouraged by the turn of events to recommend to the Senate Finance Committee "substantial concessions" in the plan to tax undistributed earnings.

"I have not had time to study the bill carefully," writes Chairman Jones, "but if substantial concessions could be made that would encourage modernization, new plant construction and new buildings to replace old ones, new equipment for railroads and industry of all kinds, including allowances for new debts created for these purposes, the employment situation, and business generally would in all probability be greatly helped and society much better served.

"You and your experts will know best the necessary formula. But, to illustrate, if a dollar so used, whether from earnings or borrowed money, could in substantial part be deducted in arriving at the adjusted net taxable income, the taxpayer would be encouraged to improve plant and equipment, thus stimulating the movement of capital goods and the employment of labor."

What Mr. Jones says now, many other men with a business background have been asserting ever since the President sent his tax program to Capitol Hill. The history of this country's development is filled with instances of small enterprises which grew great by putting back into the business a part of the profits, thus expanding plant, providing employment and increasing manufacturing efficiency.

But the really amazing thing about Mr. Jones' letter to the Finance Committee is his assertion, two months after Congress commenced consideration of the tax program, that "I have not had time to study the bill carefully." One would believe that before the Administration suggested a proposal of such vital interest to business and industry—it would have sought the views of the RFC chairman, a man with knowledge of business operations.

The fact that the Treasury did not submit the plan to Mr. Jones for his judgment is no criticism of him. Directing the largest financial institution in the country, he is a busy man, and undoubtedly does not go out of his way to find tasks. But it is certainly a criticism of the Treasury that his ripe judgment should be completely ignored, as it apparently was.

Of course, the difficulty is that Mr. Jones is not a professor nor even, as far as we know, is he the possessor of a Phi Beta Kappa key. The academic coterie responsible for New Deal programs would not think of consulting such an undistinguished person, even if he has handled almost as many millions of dollars as they dream about.

One reason why so many New Deal ideas—many with meritorious objectives—have proved impractical and were destined from the beginning for failure, is that they lacked the finishing touches of a practical, realistic hand.

A Treasury expert gets an idea. A year ago the idea was that big corporations contributed to monopolistic power. Therefore big corporations should be subjected to taxes greater than small corporations. This year the idea occurred that the country's troubles were caused by too much savings, including the retention of too large a proportion of earnings by corporations.

Tax the undistributed earnings so heavily they will virtually be confiscated unless distributed, assert the experts, apparently ignorant that such a proposal would benefit the big corporations with large surpluses already built up—the targets for last year's program.

* * *

The idea is shown to have as many fallacies in it as the other. But do the experts feel ashamed when men outside of the Government service demonstrate these defects—do they feel chagrined? They do not, for they are marching under a leader who proudly proclaims that his policy is to do "something" and if this "something" does not work, to try "something else."

Power Policy Adoption Urged By Roosevelt

President Stresses Need of Basic Program at This Session.

President Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday that he considers essential the drafting of a basic Governmental power policy in legislation at this session of Congress.

He had just told reporters that the Congressional leaders, with whom he had conferred during the day had expressed the hope that adjournment would be reached by June 6.

However, he said that Senators and Administration officials could draft within a few days the necessary language to form the basis of the future power policy of the country.

In speaking on the subject he said that the question of power rates at the various projects where the Government will have power for sale naturally brings up the general power policy question. He said this was precipitated by the Bonneville dam project on Columbia River, since it will be ready for sale by next autumn.

He continued by asserting that this meant that legislation should be had at this session to enable the Government to make contracts, stressing that it was obvious that if the power generated is to be used, preparations must be made before the delivery of the power begins.

He disclosed that Army engineers, rural electrification officials, Tennessee Valley Authority officials, and Federal Power Commission officials were working on the language of a short bill, which should be ready in two to three days.

In the meantime, the Government's action to continue until late autumn the private power companies' suit to block the PWA's model State power system in Nebraska was denied yesterday by Justice Oscar Luhring, of the District Supreme Court. He delayed entrance of an actual order in the case until today, while attorneys for the Government and the private power firms sought to agree on a time for the trial in the injunction suit invoving the $56,000,000 public power system.

At the same press conference, in which he discussed the power policy question, President Roosevelt said he believed there should be some flood control legislation at this session.

He stipulated, however, his belief that it should deal only with certain emergency situations, with a general flood-control program made a major part of the agenda next session.

This apparently forecast cutting down in Congress of the Copeland omnibus flood-control bill, which would authorize about $360,000,000 for more than 200 projects.

U. S. Theft Case Holds Pair in Paris

Paris, May 12 (AP).—Formal charges of receiving stolen goods were placed today against Bernard Klein and Jacob Schwartz, who have insisted they received $440,000 in allegedly stolen United States Treasury certificates from "a stranger in London."

They were arrested here last month.

Decision by Washington authorities to drop extradition proceedings left the pair in the hands of French courts, which decided to held them pending a search for their alleged accomplice, an American named Frankenberg.

Klein and Schwartz were arrested as part of a round-up of an international bond theft ring which New York police said was responsible for the $1,456,000 robbery of a Bank of Manhattan runner early in 1935.

Martin declined to discuss the contract. He referred all inquiries to Amsterdam or The Netherlands minister at Washington. It was learned authoritatively, however, that work on the planes had begun.

late Senator Park Trammell, of Florida.

Ranking Democratic member of the Naval Committee, Walsh was named by Majority Leader Robinson, of Arkansas, as the logical successor to the important post and Walsh said he would accept if the chairmanship were offered him by the Senate Steering Committee. He is now chairman of the Labor Committee which post he would have to relinquish.

Walsh said that as chairman of the Naval Committee he would press for full Navy strength and a renewed airship building program.

"But," he added, "I'm not going to be rushed off my feet for an enormous Navy. I do not want to rival the world in Naval construction. What we want and must have is a full 'treaty strength' Navy and an adequate air complement."

Robinson told reporters the question of naming a new Naval Committee chairman would be taken up "within a few days" by the steering committee.

His remark led to speculation as to whether a new chairman to succeed Walsh on the Labor Committee would be considered at the same time, with opinion in Senate circles differing on the probability of Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, or Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, being named.

Copeland is the ranknig member of the committee, but to become its chairman he would have to relinquish his chairmanship of the Commerce Committee, to which he has been actively devoted for two years.

Black, who heads no regular committee, is second in line on the Labor Committee and is greatly interested in the chairmanship.

The ship was bound from Salsbury to Denton and had a crew of three. The charred bones of two bodies were found in the hull.

Roosevelt Sure Of Every State, Farley Asserts

Tells Dakota Democrats He Will Get Mandate to Complete Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

Devils Lake, N. Dak., May 12.—Postmaster General James A. Farley told the State Democratic Convention today he believed the country at the November election "will insist the President shall have the opportunity to complete his job" of seeking recovery.

"The people know that the work of recovery is only half done," said the Cabinet member, who came here to address the North Dakota Democrats.

"The people are aware that no small part of the task undertaken by Franklin D. Roosevelt is to make certain that another such economic calamity as befell us shall not recur. That is why they will brook no interruption to the processes that have worked so well."

Lists Benefits to State.

Farley predicted his chief would sweep every State next fall and that he would be tendered "the greatest indorsement received by any of our Chief Executives since the birth of parties in this country."

He recited benefits he said North Dakota had received from the Administration measures, listing $30,000,000 in rental and benefit payments, $170,000,000 in loans to farmers, $9,000,000 in loans to home owners, berths for 2,200 young men in CCC camps and various conservation projects.

"As in every other State," said the speaker, "your banks have been made secure."

Taking up charges by political adversaries of the Administration, Farley said "to listen to the shocked expressions of the Republican editors and orators, not to mention the spoesmen for the Du Pont Liberty League, is to get a picture of unparalleled alarm for the security of American institutions.

"Yet, despite the numerous occasions when Presidents have differed from the views of the great judicial body, the Supreme Court remains the highest tribunal of the land and the balance among the three great divisions of our Government is preserved.

"Undoubtedly in the future, Presidents will, at times, find themselves at variance with the judicial branch. When they are ruled against they will seek new laws that meet the court's objections, just as Franklin D. Roosevelt has done, and the country will rock along as comfortably as ever, notwithstanding the cries of alarm from the prophets of disaster."

The convention elected W. E. Goltzbach as national committeeman and Miss Gertrude Dweire as national committeewoman. It also adopted a resolution of praise for the Roosevelt Administration.

Indian Hanged, Blonde Seized For Protesting

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, England, May 12.—An Indian physician was hanged today for the dismemberment murders of his wife and a nursemaid, and a coroner's jury returned a verdict condemning a wealthy woman campaigner against capital punishment for "self-advertising propaganda."

Nothing daunted, the woman, Mrs. Violet Van der Elst, said tonight she planned to carry her anti-capital punishment crusade to the United States.

Dr. Buck Ruxton, 36, was placed on the gallows for the "devil's beef-tub" slayings of the two women, one of England's most gruesome crimes of this century.

Mrs. Van der Elst, who makes it a practice publicly to protest all hangings, met a hostile reception from a jeering crowd. After the hanging she was arrested on charges involving breach of peace, obstructing traffic and dangerous driving and was released under bail for a week.

Judicial Hanging.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict that Ruxton died in a "judicial hanging," and criticized the blonde Mrs. Van der Elst.

She was resting tonight from the ordeal of the demonstration outside the Strangeways jail, where a booing, jeering crowd smashed a window of her car.

A member of the coroner's jury said, "If she spent five minutes in a children's hospital it would perhaps move her to spend her money and time for a different purpose than propaganda of this type."

Police turned back two of Mrs. Van der Elst's loud speaker trucks, not permitting them to approach the jail.

Ruxton, of Indian blood, who came to England in 1925 and wed while studying at Edinburgh, was hanged shortly after 9 a. m. and a few minutes later a black flag was run up the prison tower.

Was in Jealous Rage.

He was convicted of killing and dismembering his wife, Mrs. Isabell Ruxton, in a jealous rage last September and then dealing the same death to the maid, May Jane Rogerson, because she entered his operating room as he was strangling his wife. Both bodies, cut into bits, were thrown in a ravine on the Scottish border known as the "Devil's Beef-tub."

Mrs. Van der Elst arrived an hour before the hanging, only to be taunted by the crowd.

"How would like your daughter cut up?" one woman shouted.

When she left after the hanging she scattered pamphlets bearing the title, "Barbarism in the Twentieth Century," and asserting "Ruxton was without a doubt the maddest of all insane people that ever were executed."

Several women in the crowd fainted.

A heavy mist grounded airplanes Mrs. Van der Elsts had hired to fly over the prison to drop protest pamphlets.

French Army Units Set Up at Border

Paris, May 12 (AP).—The French army general staff issued orders today establishing contingents of French North African troops permanently opposite the German frontier.

The troops were rushed from southern France to the eastern border on emergency orders immediately after Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland, March 7.

The Sixth Moroccan Regiment will take permanent headquarters at Verdun. One of the regiments of the First North African Division, formerly stationed at Lyon, will be incorporated in the Second North African Division, with headquarters at Toul.

The Twenty-first Regiment of Algerian Tirailleurs will be incorporated with the Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth Algerian Tirailleur regiments, at Morhange and Strasbourg, to form a new Fourth North African Division, with headquarters at Epinal.

Septuplets Reported In Nicaragua; 3 Living

Managua, Nicaragua, May 12 (AP). Three babies out of an alleged multiple birth of seven were reported alive in Rivas, 60 miles southeast of here, today.

The governor of the Department of Rivas informed President Juan B. Sacasa last week that he had been informed of the birth of septuplets to an Indian woman named Sinforosa Martinez in an isolated village, Poza Azul, about 20 miles from the City of Rivas.

2 Fliers Hurt In Plane Crash At Alexandria

Fishermen Rescue Pair as Ship Nosedives Into River.

Two were injured, one so seriously that he may die, when a two-seated training plane in which they were stunting above Alexandria nose-dived into the Potomac at the foot of Duke street late yesterday.

Carlin Peyton, 26, limited commercial pilot, of 208 Gibbons street, Alexandria, who was at the controls, was given an even chance to live at Alexandria Hospital. He has a fractured nose and a crushed chest.

His companion, James E. Lyons, 32, WPA worker and student pilot, of 1819 North Capitol street, Washington, was dismissed from the hospital after being treated for cuts and bruises.

Only courage and presence of mind of two witnesses saved Peyton from death, police said.

At the time the small plane, which belongs to Peyton and is kept at Beacon Field, was stunting above the city, Garlton Padgett, 36, of 9 Walnut street, Alexandria, and Luther Sutherland, 50, of 330 North St. Asaph street, Alexandria, were fishing off a wharf.

The plane was flying at an altitude of only 50 feet, when, to avoid striking a pole on one of the wharves, Peyton banked his ship. The craft was too low, however, and plunged into the river.

Padgett and his companion leaped into a small motorboat and the former dived, pulling Peyton free of the wreckage. Lyons was thrown clear and swam ashore.

"I don't know how Peyton lived that long under water," Padgett said later.

Peyton had been flying several years. Yyons became interested in aviation last year when he won a series of flying lessons as the result of a newspaper contest.

The plane was demolished. As its wreckage was towed ashore dozens of children raided it for souvenirs.

Flu and Flood Peril Fort Yukon in Alaska

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 12 (AP).—A flood emergency at Fort Yukon, aggravated by an outbreak of influenza already responsible for six deaths, was reported today in a radio dispatch.

The whole town, 150 miles northeast of here, was flooded by an ice break-up yesterday and the airport also was under water, preventing relief by plane.

Wilson Killers Start Serving Prison Terms

Sutton, McDermott Taken to Baltimore; Latter Lauds Police.

Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, and Albert (Bumps) Sutton began serving their life terms in Maryland State Penitentiary at Baltimore yesterday for the parts they played in the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson.

On the way from Cumberland, Md., where both were convicted last week, McDermott told Lieut. John Fowler, in whose custody he was, that he thought the police should be congratulated on his capture.

"It was swell work," the emaciated little gunman said, "and the conviction was clever work, too."

But Sutton, credited with being the "brains" that laid the plot to kill Edward (Mickey) McDonald, for whom the bullets that brought death to Wilson October 23, 1934, were intended, was in high spirits.

While McDermott was lauding the Wilson squad, which hunted down the slain route carrier's killers, Sutton said he intended to win a parole for good behavior within 15 years.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, will nolpros all indictments returned against William H. Cleary and George Dewey Jenkins, gangsters of Baltimore and Washington, in connection with the murder, it was learned yesterday.

The move will be taken to make good the promise of immunity given to Cleary and Jenkins for turning State's evidence against Myers, Sutton and McDermott.

However, Cleary and Jenkins will be turned over to District of Columbia authorities, where both are under indictment, Pugh said.

U. S. Prepares To Ask Gallows For Robinson

Lindbergh Law Provides for Death Penalty; Life Given Campbell.

America today is free of fugitive kidnapers, and the "snatch racket" appears to be as moribund as grave robbing.

In Louisville, Ky., the Federal Government is mapping a plan of prosecution against Thomas H. Robinson, jr., which, if successful, will make kidnaping seem even more hazardous than it has heretofore.

The Government, it was announced yesterday, will ask that Robinson pay the death penalty on a Kentucky gallows for the $50,000 kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, Louisville society matron, in the summer of 1934.

Under the so-called Lindbergh kidnaping law, the death penalty may be invoked when the kidnaper harms his victim. Robinson, it was announced yesterday by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, confessed that he slugged Mrs. Stoll with a piece of lead pipe before he spirited her away.

Life Sentence.

As Robinson paced his cell in Louisville yesterday, Harry Campbell, crony of the murderous Alvin Karpis, was sentenced to life imprisonment by a Federal judge in St. Paul after pleading guilty to his part in the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, wealthy banker.

Robinson, whose ability to masquerade as a woman helped him elude police for nearly two years, was captured Monday night in Glendale and flown to Louisville in a Government-chartered plane. He was the last criminal who rated the label of Public Enemy No. 1, and the third occupying top rank to be captured within 10 days, the others being "Old Creepy" Karpis, Bremer kidnaper, and William Mahan, kidnaper of George Weyerhaeuser, 9-year-old Tacoma, Wash., lumber heir.

Robinson told Federal agents in Louisville that he spent $45,000 of the $50,000 ransom from the Stoll family in "high living."

"Robinson told me," said Agent E. J. Connelly, "that he had traveled from New York to California since he left the Midwest. Several times he used automobiles and once he hired an airplane.

"He spent much of his time dressed as a woman and hung out at the fanciest cocktail bars and the swankiest hotels. He said all the money went for a good time."

Agents Praised.

Praise for the Federal agents was voiced in the Senate yesterday by Chairman Ashurst, of the Judiciary Committee. Ashurst also commended Attorney General Homer Cummings for his "courage and foresight" in retaining Director Hoover when the Roosevelt Administration took over the Justice Department.

Friends of Hoover yesterday recalled the heckling he received just a month ago from Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, when he was before McKeller's committee.

"But the fact is," McKeller taunted, "that young Robinson is still at large after two years. How many people have been killed by your department since you have been allowed to use guns? Did you ever make an actual arrest?"

Karpis, Campbell, Mahan and Robinson were arrested without the firing of a shot. Hoover personally led the raids on Karpis and Campbell.

Tried in Fall.

The banishing of Harry Campbell for life in St. Paul yesterday follows closely the sentencing of William Mahan to 60 years in prison for the $200,000 kidnaping of 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, Tacoma, Wash., lumber heir.

Karpis will be tried for the Bremer kidnaping in the fall. First he must stand trial for the $100,000 kidnaping of William Hamm, wealthy St. Paul brewer.

Federal agents tried for four days to draw from Campbell information which might be used against Karpis in the Bremer case. Their efforts were fruitless.

Judge M. M. Joyce asked Campbell if he had anything to say.

The prisoner who, with Karpis, used a machine gun to blast his way out of a hotel trap in Atlantic City last summer, now probably will be sent to Leavenworth Penitentiary and from there to Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco Bay, where other members of the Karpis-Barker gang are held.

Arthur (Doc) Barker, son of the villainous Kate (Ma) Barker, is there, and so, too, are Harry Sawyer, "finger man" in the Bremer kidnaping; Volney Davis, who delivered the ransom notes, and William Weaver, who guarded Bremer in what the banker called his "living hell" at Bensenville.

Schwab, a woman who gave her name as Josephine Grady, and an unidentified man were taken from an east-bound train by Federal agents following a tip from the sheriff's office at Reno, Nev.

Hoover said that Schwab had admitted blowing a safe in a San Francisco Western Union office in late April. Two books of $10 American Express travelers' checks and one book of $20 checks were found in his baggage.

An examination of the baggage also disclosed 24 sticks of dynamite with fuses and caps, a small quantity of nitroglycerin and a .45-caliber Colt automatic.

Schwab, known also under the aliases of Benjamin Smith and Charles Ausburn, escaped from a chain gang at Dublin, Ga., on March 15, 1936, while serving a 6-to-11 year term for theft of a safe.

The arrest of Joe Pannell, No. 1 desperado of Denver, was announced by Daniel M. Ladd, chief of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation in Chicago.

Federal agents described Pannell as a former convict, a kidnaper and general "bad man" of the Rocky Mountains.

Pannell, 41, was arrest in a tavern on Chicago's South Side. He was wanted by Denver authorities for the $24,000 robbery of Max Schwartz, Denver real estate operator, August 2, 1935.

Schwartz was ambushed and shot to death November 23, 1935, three months after the robbery. Denver police, Ladd said, wished to question Pannell in connection with the killing of Schwartz and a number of other robberies.

Pannell was seized by the Government men under the new Federal law making it a crime to flee to another State when charged with a crime.

The fugitive, who is blind in his right eye, was employed as a cook in the tavern where he was arrested.

U. S. Physician In China Denies Plot to Kill Wife

Dr. John Colbert, 50, of St. Louis, Goes on Trial; Spouse Backs Him.

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin, China, May 12.—A smiling American physician, with the wife he is accused of trying to murder at his side, pleaded innocent today when his strange trial opened in United States district court.

Dr. John Colbert, 50, formerly of St. Louis, Mo., is charged with attempting to remove his fourth wife by poison. Young Mrs. Colbert is a leader in Tientsin's international society. The doctor is one of the best-known American physicians in China.

District Attorney Felthan Watson charged that Colbert falsely told his athletic wife she was ill and began a slow, scientific campaign to kill her by putting poisons in her medicine while treating her.

British police arrested Colbert December 25 at the request of United States consular authorities. He was freed under bail of $25,000.

Colbert, before coming to China, had lived in many countries. He taught medicine at Mackenzie College, Brazil, and practiced in Puerto Rico, Colombia, France, Japan and Manila. He is a former commander of the American Legion Post here.

Both Colbert and Mrs. Colbert smiled when the district attorney described her as "a young woman who always prided herself on her vigorous health."

Watson, outlining his case, asserted that last September 23, the day after Mrs. Colbert won a tennis championship, Dr. Colbert said she appeared ill and pronounced her 40 per cent anaemic after an examination.

Dr. Colbert then "began a series of unprecedented purchases of poisons," the prosecution continued. Watson said Dr. Colbert diagnosed his wife's illness as an enlarged heart and she was put to bed. Dr. Colbert called Dr. J. W. Grice, a Briton, into consultation, the court was told. Dr. Grice found Mrs. Colbert's heart to be normal, Watson continued, but discovered symptoms of poisoning.

Exiled Selassie Goes On Tour in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, May 12 (Palcor Agency).—Emperor Haile Selassie, although suffering from bronchitis, went on a sight-seeing tour through Jerusalem today in his limousine.

The secretary of the self-exiled ruler said the Negus is "suffering slightly from bronchitis, which was aggravated through having passed through country which had been gassed."

The Empress Mennen went on an informal shopping tour of the city and bought a number of hats. Later she dropped into a cafe in the center of the city for afternoon tea.

The NEW AIR-CONDITIONED ICE refrigerator

"Droopy" lettuce lacks in taste as well as looks, but you have to put up with it in an ordinary refrigerator. Most refrigerators offer plenty of "cold," but it's a dry cold that extracts the natural flavors and juices from meats and vegetables.

In the air conditioned Ice Refrigerator there is a constant circulation of pure, moist, "washed" air that keeps meats tender and juicy for days—vegetables crisp as though fresh from the garden. Remember—In refrigeration, cold alone is not enough, you must have the added protection offered only by the air conditioned Ice Refrigerator.

Remember, too, that this newest development in refrigeration costs but ⅓ to ⅓ of what you would expect to pay—with the additional advantage of our extremely low monthly payment plan. Why not phone or visit us today!

Roosevelt Aids Ladies Opposed To Hat-Doffing

Sponsors Move to Protect Women From Elbows in Elevators.

He had just been told of the high moral and social aims of the two new organizations now spreading allegedly subversive doctrine through the country—the A. P. T. O. H. E. and the S. F. L. W. E. H. B. B. B. E. G. T. O. H. E.

The first society, a creation of Fred Perkins, the long-suffering Gray-haired correspondent of the Pittsburgh Press, is the Association for the Prevention of Taking Off Hats in Elevators.

The second, formed yesterday as a woman's auxiliary to the parent organization, which will hold its first banquet and mass meeting Saturday night, is the Society for Protection of Ladies Whose Eyes Have Been Blackened by the Bending of Elbows of Gentlemen Taking Off Hats in Elevators.

The President immediately enrolled himself as a firm sponsor of the movement, which has rapidly spread throughout the city, although resisted as yet by the State Department, where diplomats, long trained in the doffing of silk hats at the drop of a cookie, are unable to adapt themselves to the "New Thought."

The President said many persons had criticized the Administration for a tendency to put everything under Government regulation, but that the question obviously cried for complete Federal control.

Only an hour before, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes had pledged his whole-hearted support to the movement, recalling that he had often thought, when dodging ladies' plumed hats in elevators, that "the wrong sex are removing the right hats."

It was believed that conservative groups in Washington, alarmed at the rapid growth of the new freedom, were preparing a last-ditch defense of tradition, while some quarters understood that lawyers were combing the files to see if the Supreme Court had ever ruled on any phase of the problem.

Grand Sachem Perkins, interviewed while softly humming "Hats Off Only When the Flag Passes By," was reluctant to comment, stating that he was working on his opus magnus (Latin for Saturday night speech), but that he saw eventual victory ahead for the free-thinkers who will hereafter refuse to bare their noggins in elevators.

Maverick Proves He Is a Hat Doffer

Bogoraz Dies; Ethnologist, 71, Exiled by Czar

By the Associated Press.

Kharkov, The Ukraine, U. S. S. R., May 12.—Prof. Vladimir G. Bogoraz, internationally known ethnographer, died today. He was 71 years old.

Exiled to Siberia by the Czarist regime for his revolutionary activities in 1882, Prof. Bogoraz became recognized as the foremost authority on the primitive tribes of that frozen land.

A sketch published by Asia magazine when he attended the International Conference of Americanists in New York, in 1928, says Prof. Bogoraz began a study of the 20-odd tribes with two comrades, likewise exiled, the late L. G. Sternberg and Dr. Vladimir I. Jochelson.

In 1898 Bogaraz and Jochelson, while still in exile, were chosen as the Russian members of the Jessup North Pacific expedition by the American Museum of National History, with which Bogoraz subsequently was closely identified.

For two years Prof. Bogoraz traveled among the maritime and Reindeer Chukchee and became their close friend. He ate with them in their huts, heard their legends and rode their reindeer.

His studies were published in his highly regarded monograph on the material culture, religion, social organization and mythology of the Chukchee. Numerous of his collected tribal articles are in the American Museum.

After the Bolshevik revolution, Prof. Bogoraz took the lead in seeking to improve the condition of the northern tribes. He was responsible for the establishment of Northern College, in Leningrad, founded exclusively for the younger generation of Siberians.

As head of the Department of Ethnography of the University of Leningrad, he also sent his students into the Polar regions to establish elementary schools.

Revolt Grows on Tax Bill

which retain more than 50 per cent of earnings.

Harrison said he asked for estimates on this plan for use in executive committee sessions, when he hoped there would be "a meeting of minds" on the tax bill. He said he did not necessarily put it forth as a "compromise."

Harrison wants the Treasury to develop whether this plan will raise the $620,000,000 asked by the President. Meanwhile, behind the scenes, a plan was said to be crystallizing to raise the full amount ($517,000,000) in three-year, temporary taxes, which Secretary Morgenthau says the House bill falls short of doing. To do this, another $380,000,000 must be found. One method now being discussed would levy a capital stock tax of $1 per $1,000 for as long a period as is necessary to raise the needed money, and then repeal the capital stock tax altogether. The House plan was to cut the present $1.40 capital stock tax to 70 cents for the current year, for repealing this tax outright.

Talked With President.

Word that the Senate Finance Committee chairman had conferred with President Roosevelt at the White House Monday night, and the President had reiterated that what he wanted primarily was revenue, and Congress should draw the law, was confirmed meanwhile by Harrison. The committee chairman said he thought the President believed the original Treasury proposal was a good plan, but added:

"The President said he wanted to get so much money. He did not say what method was to be employed."

It was believed significant, however, that the alternative proposal held out yesterday by Harrison embodies the principle of inducing dividend distribution through taxation of undistributed earnings.

The "simplified" tax schedule delivered to the committee yesterday by Oliphant was in response to a request from committee members who had complained of the complexity of the House draft. The new schedule reduces to a page virtually the same tax rules running over 10 pages of the House measure.

Simplified Schedule.

In addition, the Treasury schedule makes provision for a small credit to low-earning corporations, before the tax is applied. Oliphant said this has not yet been fully worked out, but it might amount to a $1,000 credit for companies earning up to $20,000.

The Treasury's "simplification" of the House corporate tax rates was proposed as follows:

"Rate of tax in general—There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the adjusted net income of every corporation a tax equal to the sum of the following:

"Two-sevenths of the amount of the undistributed net income which does not exceed 14 per centum of the adjusted net income;

"One-third of the amount by which the undistributed net income exceeds 14 per centum and does not exceed 29 per centum of the adjusted net income;

"Three-eighths of the amount by which the undistributed net income exceeds 29 per centum and does not exceed 45 per centum of the adjusted net income; and

"One-half of the amount by which the undistributed net income exceeds 45 per centum of the adjusted net income."

Held Fair to Banks.

Chairman Jones of the RFC, who had been requested by the committee to give his attitude on some phases of the proposed tax, replied that the tax bill, as it affects banks (given a 15 per cent preferential flat rate under the measure), "seems entirely fair and desirable."

"While it requires banks to pay some additional taxes, it permits them to strengthen their capital structure, which is in the public interest."

As to the advisability of exempting bank holding company affiliates from a tax on that portion of income they are required to retain because of guaranty agreements entered into with the RFC, Jones said his corporation would consent to "modifications" in these agreements wherever they impose an unfair burden on the holding company.

Chairman Jones, however, broke the hitherto solid Administration support of the bill when he pointed out the advisabiltiy of "substantial concessions" to industries desiring to invest earnings in plant and equipment. He said the "employment situation and business generally would in all probability be greatly helped and society much better served," by such relief.

Oliphant Defends Plan.

"You and your experts will know best the necessary formula," the RFC head wrote Chairman Harrison. "But, to illustrate, if a dollar so used, whether from earnings or borrowed money, could in substantial part be deducted in arriving at the adjusted net income, the taxpayer would be encouraged to improve plant and equipment, thus stimulating the movement of capital goods and the employment of labor."

Before the Finance Committee, Oliphant opened his defense of the bill with a statement on the pick-up in business, which he said had not yet been materially affected in salaries, rents or interest rates. He asserted that individuals and business partnerships are now bearing their full share of the tax burden.

"Are corporations doing so?" asked the Treasury general counsel.

"The answer to that question—which surprised the Treasury when it got it—makes no other form of taxation possible of defense.

"If corporation profits went out to stockholders and passed through the tax mill, it would produce

Pointing out that if dividends were distributed to individuals in the $1,000,000 brackets they would pay 73 per cent, and if retained by the company, 42½ per cent maximum, Byrd demanded Oliphant correct his statement. Oliphant said he would.

Challenging the expert testimony time and again, the Virginian once more took issue with Oliphant when he asserted that "the chain stores are destroying our individual merchant class."

Byrd contended that the pending bill will help the chains to wipe out the individual merchants altogether.

Fears Perpetual Avoidance.

Using the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. as an example, Byrd said it had an accumulated surplus of $98,000,000 that would enable it "perpetually" to avoid payment of tax under the bill.

"This company will pay out all of its current earnings in dividends. It would save this tax, amounting to $3,000,000, and then compete with the individual merchant who has to pay taxes."

"I'd like Mr. Oliphant to explain that to me," put in Bailey, "since he is arguing the case of the little fellow. How under this bill could the small man compete with A & P?"

Oliphant replied that the bill could not remedy "all tax inequities."

"The trouble is," said the Treasury expert, amid committee laughter, "this bill should have come sooner."

Runs Critical Gamut.

Senators Alben W. Barkley, Kentucky Democrat; Chairman Harrison; Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama; and Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, occasionally spoke up in Oliphant's defense, but other members who joined in the discussion at all asked critical questions.

Oliphant ran through the gamut of critical testimony presented to the committee, found "merit" in some, disputed others, and concluded with the statement:

"So far as this might be accomplished, the effect of the bill would be democratic rather than autocratic, in the direction of a more liberal rather than a regimented economy."

Wants Processing Taxes.

Wallace at the morning session of the committee, submitted a list of some agricultural commodities, largely corresponding with a similar list furnished the House last month, against which he said processing taxes should be levied. The House Ways and Means committee refused to consider revival of processing levies, and there is strong opposition to them in the Senate.

Wallace said he urged revival of the levies because they "would constitute only a very slight burden on consumers" and "on the ground that agriculture has a profound interest in the maintenance of the Federal Government's revenues and in the production of a part of such revenues from sources having some relationship to agriculture."

The committee adopted a resolution by Senator Byrd authorizing Morgenthau to "legally" make available 135 corporate earnings data to the committee this morning.

"I have been active for 40 years in the Democratic Party and for the last 24 years I have served as Democratic national committeeman for the District, having been elected to that office at the Baltimore convention in 1912. I have had the honor to serve under Woodrow Wilson during his two terms in office and fought hard to maintain the party organization during the succeeding 12 years of Republican rule.

"At the Democratic national convention in San Francisco, in 1920, it was my pleasure materially to assist in the nomination of Franklin Delano Roosevelt as the vice presidential candidate of our party, he having been placed in nomination by Judge T. T. Ansberry, a member of the District delegation.

"Long before the Chicago convention, in 1932, I was one of the active supporters of Roosevelt for election as President. At that convention our delegation supported Mr. Roosevelt as the climax of a campaign in his behalf in which I was active long before.

"My long period of service makes it difficult for me to retire especially as I am assured I would be re-elected without opposition if I offered myself. I find it is necessary for me to relieve myself of the burden of party office so that I shall have more time to devote to my personal business."

Pope Attacks World Growth Of Communism

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, May 12.—Pope Pius hailed the "triumphant news" of peace in Africa today and then, turning to other matters, asserted the state is encroaching upon the church's domains.

The pontiff, inaugurating the World Exposition of the Catholic Press, attacked communism. He mentioned its development in Soviet Russia, Mexico, Spain, Uruguay and Brazil.

Speaking to thousands of visitors from a special throne in the Pine Court of the exposition, he expressed hope the end of the Italo-Ethiopian war would be "a prelude to true European and world peace."

He remarked that the opening coincides with the "triumphant news of a great and good people."

Fruitful Prelude.

"This peace should be, and we hope will be, a fruitful and coefficient prelude to that true European and world peace of which this exposition itself should be and is a clear symbol and real proof of an efficacious instrument of fervid and trustful invocation in many languages to all, to God and men in Heaven as on earth; peace, peace, peace."

In charging that the state is encroaching upon the church, the pontiff declared, "the Catholic Church does not intend at all to usurp anything of what appertains to politics, properly so-called in accordance with their end."

He asserted politics are creating every sort of difficulty, however, for the Roman Catholic Church, obstructing it in those "vast fields which have a greater need for the church and could most profit by her—the youth, the family, the schools, the press and the popular masses."

Commands Respect.

"The church recognizes to the state its own sphere of action. It teaches this and commands conscientious respect for it.

"But it cannot admit that the state should do less for morals and it cannot forget the precepts of its divine founder, who commanded the church to occupy herself with morality wherever it entered and should enter."

Discussing the absence of Russia and Germany from the exposition, the pontiff said Russia was "full of hatred against God."

Germany, he added, is "particularly dear to us, although regardless of every justice and truth, owing to the artificial confusion between religion and politics, it does not want the Catholic press to exist."

Stevens' Funeral Scheduled Today

Boys Club Started Him, Says Sarron

"It was the Boys Club in my own home town that got me interested in boxing," Petey Sarron, new featherweight champion of the world, told the directors and managers of the Metropolitan Police Department Boys Club yesterday at a luncheon in his honor at the Willard Hotel.

Sarron, wearing a small patch over his left eye as a souvenir of his match with Freddie Miller Monday night, expressed his thanks to the Boys Club officers for arranging the bout.

In closing the meeting at the Willard yesterday, Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, warned that to avoid fraud, "associate membership" cards in the Boys Club would be sold only by police in uniform. The price, he said, would be $1.

The annual convention of the Episcopal Church, Diocese of Washington, yesterday announced that it had adopted a resolution approving the work of Maj. Brown and urging the people of Washington to give their support to the Boys Club.

Gets State Department Appointment

Hull Outlines French Pact

tice, but not until a year after the past May 6.

The wide extent of the new breach in the tariff barriers which have slowed the stream of international trade to a trickle can be shown by comparative export-import figures for 1929 and 1935.

In 1929 the United States exports to France totaled $265,591,695. In 1935 they amounted to $116,920,014.

In 1929 the United States imported from France goods valued at $171,485,155, while imports fell to $53,614,610 in 1935.

The most important single French concession was perhaps the item covering American automobiles and automobile parts. The duty on chasis for passenger cars will be lowered 50 per cent and a quota of 3,062 quintals (each quintal is 220.4 pounds) will be annually established in addition to the present quota of 932 quintals.

Other supplementary quotas in this connection include:

Passenger cars with bodies, 3,331 quintals; bodies and parts of bodies, 3,419 quintals; both of which are in addition to present quotas of 6,512 and 4,848 quintals, respectively.

The other French concessions, in which they either lowered duties or raised the import quota included:

Reductions in 19 rates of duty affecting products of which the imports into France and the United States in 1935 totaled about $4,560,000 (about 53,500,000 francs).

Existing rates of duty are continued on a large number of articles on which the United States had already benefited by minimum French tariff rates. These imports were valued in 1935 at about $5,140,000 (about 77,100,000 francs).

On 44 products the French made quota concessions to the United States, either by supplementary quotas or by definite allocations to the United States. French imports of these products in 1935 from the United States totaled about $13,730,000 (about 205,900,000 francs).

The French tobacco monopoly gave assurances of purchase of American leaf tobacco, and the motion picture film importers assured this Government that United States films will continue to be received for French exhibition in the present favorable status.

The French tobacco monopoly agreed to take for the 1936 season not less than $3,200,000 in value or 20,500,000 pounds by weight in American tobacco, a concession regarded here as a check to the long declining trend of French tobacco buying in this country. It is actually a 10 per cent increase over the 1935 amount.

The American concessions to France include agreement by Secretary Hull to recommend to Congress the removal of the customs tax now applied against coal or coke coming from French Indo-China, a tax applied in accordance with the revenue act provision that special duties must be applied to coal from countries which sell more of the commodity here than they buy.

However, the primary American concessions to France were on the luxury articles. The duty on champagnes and other sparkling wines was dropped from $6 to $3 per gallon, a 61 cent per bottle reduction.

Still wines and vermouth of not more than 14 per cent alcoholic content took a tariff slash from $1.25 to 75 cents per gallon.

The cotton levers lace of 12 points and finer will come in at 60 per cent ad valorem instead of 90 as heretofore. The reduction is not seriously competitive with American industry, officials said, since but 46 of the 612 machines in this country capable of such fine lace-making can be adjusted to 12 points or finer.

On perfumes the ad valorem of 75 per cent with a 40 cents a pound duty will be cut to 40 cents a pound, with 37½ per cent ad valorem. These apply to straight perfumes. Ad valorem duty on perfume mixtures was cut from 54 per cent to 34 per cent.

The rest of the list includes:

Cordials, liqueurs, vanilla beans, tinsel products, Roquefort cheese, broadsilks and woven rayon fabrics, cigarette paper, marachino and candied cherries, canned mushrooms, corsets and elastic fabrics, globes, and blocked and trimmed straw hats.

Paris, May 12 (AP).—The Franco-American trade treaty, Minister of Finance George Bonnet said tonight, is an "example of liberalism" in a time when "people tend to shut themselves much more behind their own trade barriers."

Bonnet called upon other nations to follow the lead of France and the United States, declaring "such pacts are not only treaties of commerce but in such troubled times are vertable guarantees of peace for the world."

The commerce minister said the accord would permit France to participate in "the great current economic upswing from which the United States is benefiting today, thanks to the admirable efforts of President Roosevelt."

Bishops Picked By Methodists In Fourth Ballot

Ohio Pastor, Chancellor of Syracuse University Are Elected.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 12.—Delegates to the Methodist Episcopal General Conference elected two new bishops late today.

Dr. Wilbur E. Hammaker, minister at a Youngstown, Ohio, church for 21 years, and Dr. Charles W. Flint, chancellor of Syracuse (N.Y.) University, were elected to the board of bishops on the fourth ballot. Two more members of the board, one a Negro, remain to be elected.

In third place after the fourth vote was Dr. Harry W. McPherson, president of Illinois Wesleyan University at Bloomington, who received 214 votes.

Dr. Roy L. Smith, of Los Angeles, one of the strongest candidates, withdrew after the third ballot today. A few hours before as the second ballot was read, Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of Depauw University, who required only 47 more votes for election, withdrew his name. Church leaders had conceded his election on the next ballot.

Approving a committee report to revise the constitution of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, the conference moved today to obtain greater power over the church board.

Approval of the constitution change, which provided for election of the board's executive secretary by the conference instead of the board, was seen by churchmen as a move to retire Dr. Clarence True Wilson, veteran crusader agains liquor.

Britain to Deny Aiding Ethiopia In Sharp Reply

Answer to Italy to Be of Sensational Nature, Reports Say.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 12. — The British government tonight was preparing a sharp reply to new Italian charges that Great Britain supplied dumdum bullets to Ethiopian warriors.

Authoritative sources said the answer would be "of a somewhat sensational nature."

Late in the day, Ambassador Dino Grandi of Italy formally notified the British government that Italy had annexed Ethiopia.

Grandi, recently returned from Rome, deposited a copy of the annexation decree at the foreign office and departed without receiving a reply.

At the same time, Prime Minister Baldwin told the House of Commons that Warnex C. Martin, the Ethiopian minister to London, still was recognized as the accredited representative of his country.

On several previous occasions, Italy has alleged the Ethiopians used dumdum bullets and these prohibited missels came from Great Britain.

The new charge, deposited with the League of Nations, was said to accuse Great Britain and the Ethiopian Legation in London of being jointly concerned with supplying the illegal ammunition.

Great Britain's reply, said an authoritative source, would be of a nature to dispose of the new charge effectively and completely.

The reaction in government quarters to the Italian delegation's withdrawal from the League of Nations Council session at Geneva today was that the matter was for Rome to interpret.

Responsible persons were inclined to brush aside hints that the matter was to be interpreted seriously.

John Brown's Handcuffs In Collection to Be Sold

this empire with arms "against anyone."

But the newspaper devoted most of its editorial space to the civil development of Ethiopia.

Some readers supposed he meant Germany.

(It was reported on reliable authority at Geneva that a secret Italo-German exchange of views took place Monday in Berlin.)

Military sources disclosed that orders were being prepared for the dissolution of five volunteer Blackshirt divisions which distinguished themselves in vanquished Ethiopia.

But they intimated the order might be held up if the situation, in consequence of Geneva's insistence on sanctions, becomes more cloudy.

Total 100,000 Men.

The five divisions total about 100,000 men. Eight regular army divisions in East Africa would stay under arms. Among the volunteers are the "parini," or foreign legion, including many Americans.

In Africa, Viceroy Pietro Badoglio moved to "systematize" all of the conquered land; Count Galeazzo Ciano, Il Duce's son-in-law, began his duties as propaganda chief; Gen. Rodolfo Graziani cleaned up in burned and looted Harar.

Italian press dispatches from Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland, said felt, however, that it might be a prelude to a final departure.

Baron Aloisi, wearing light gray tweeds, leaned out of the railway carriage window and chatted amiably with friends, but there also was an undercurrent of tension.

Police closely guarded the station to forestall any anti-Fascist demonstration and a detachment of police accompanied the delegation as far as the Italian border.

Doctors Debate Birth Control; Vote to Install Dying Comrade

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 12.—Birth control "propagandists" were blamed for an alarming slump in child bearing by educated families and with failing to aid the poor whose cause they champion in a report today before the American Medical Association.

Taking up one of its most controversial subjects behind closed doors, delegated representatives of more than 100,000 of the Nation's physicians heard a special committee State as a result of an extensive investigation:

1. "Belief that at present the part of our population with the best education and presumably the most competent socially and economically is not reproducing itself and that birth control propaganda is partially responsible for this condition."

2. It found "no evidence available to justify the broad claim that dissemination of contraceptive information will improve the economic status of the lower income groups."

3. There is "no evidence that existing laws, Federal or State, have interfered with any medical advice which a physician has felt called upon to furnish his patients, but that clarification of the laws is desirable."

The report was submitted by a committee comprising Dr. Carl Henry Davis, Milwaukee; Dr. John Rock, Boston; Dr. James R. Bloss, Huntington, W. Va.; Dr. Everett D. Plass, Iowa City, Iowa; Dr. George W. Kosmak, New York, and Dr. W. W. Woodward, Chicago.

"Contraception has been kept before the general public by well organized propagandists," the committee stated, and most people are relatively uninformed as to "the possible dangers."

The House of Delegates voted "disapproval of propaganda directed to the public by lay bodies organized solely for the purpose of disseminating contraceptive information without consideration or restraint." It charged such organizations with creating "an entirely false sense of values with respect to the important functions of child bearing and of parenthood."

Court Missed by Clerk First Time in 27 Years

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 12.—When the May term of Circuit Court opened here yesterday, what is believed to be a record for continuous service was broken. Clerk of the Court Edward Oswald was not present to swear in the jurors. Prior to yesterday, Clerk Oswald never had failed to participate in opening court in his 27 years in office. Recently he was taken ill and is now a patient at Washington County Hospital.

Dramatics at Convention Provided in Vote on New President.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 12.—The rare sight of noted physicians trembling with emotion because of a critical illness—ordinarily they battle it daily with outward calm—provided unscheduled dramatics today at the American Medical Association convention.

In the end, sentiment, a factor which physicians find it expedient to submerge, swept deliberate questions aside. The physicians decided to install as their new president a man whose leg has been amputated in a desperate attempt to save his life and who has developed gangrene in the other leg.

Quiet voices trembled unrestrained at the association's house of delegates meeting while close check was kept by long-distance telephone with the hospital bedside of Dr. J. Tate Mason, at Seattle, Wash.

Performing "the saddest task of my life," Dr. Mason's close personal friend, Dr. John H. O'Shea, of Spokane, Wash., reported the judicial committee had interpreted the Constitution as favoring the incumbent president hold over.

But Dr. Mason was the president-elect. The honor of heading a body of more than 100,000 leading medical experts of the Nation was at stake.

Voices shaking, physician after physician claimed the floor—Dr. Holman Taylor, Fort Worth, Tex.; Dr. Samuel J. Kopetzky, New York; Dr. Wright Clarkson, Petersburg, Va.; Dr. W. H. Seemann, New Orleans; Dr. Edward M. Pallette, Los Angeles.

"I move Dr. Mason be installed if he is alive tonight," Dr. Pallette said.

Dr. O'Shea arose to report the latest news from the bedside—development of a gangrenous condition in the other leg.

"They fear he may not live through the day," he concluded.

On the platform Dr. George E. Follansbee, of Cleveland, chairman of the judicial council, nervously drummed his fingers, caught between two floods of sentiment and legal procedure.

Then some of the tension was relieved. Came a hospital bulletin that Dr. Mason undoubtedly would live for another 24 hours.

Dr. Pallette's motion was called up and carried by a deep chorus of "ayes," followed by a thundering wave of applause.

Group in House To Map Course In Prison Study

Sub-committee Report on Politics Charge May Be Submitted.

The House District Committee today will meet in executive session to discuss what further steps should be taken by its special sub-committee to investigate charges that the District Reformatory has become a hotbed of political and personal rivalry with consequent maladministration.

Chairman Mary T. Norton stated yesterday that the sub-committee, headed by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, has as yet made no report to her and that she thought the whole committee might be apprised of whatever evidence the sub-committee has gathered.

The sub-committee is scheduled to meet tomorrow morning to map its course of procedure and to decide what District officials or employes should be summoned.

It is indicated that the principal witness will be Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of the District penal institutions; Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of the District Reformatory, and Elwood Street, director of public welfare.

Charges Studied.

The sub-committee is examining charges that a feud between Barnard and Peak over whether the latter is to succeed the former has reached such proportions that the administration of the prison is suffering.

Vague reports of petty graft, both at Lorton and Occoquan, also have been made, but it is not known whether they have been substantiated.

Just how far the inquiry will be continued is conjectural and probably will depend upon the decision of the full committee today.

The sub-committee members, Representatives Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, have been invited by Schulte to meet tomorrow morning to discuss plans for a hearing.

Peak Has Backing.

Col. Peak, who seeks to succeed to the job of superintendent of District penal institutions when Barnard is retired, has substantial Congressional backing. It is understood that many members of both the House and the Senate District committees have indorsed his candidacy.

The only other outstanding candidate for the post is Harold Donnell, head of the Maryland State penal institutions, but the District Commissioners refused to appoint him some time ago even after he had been recommended by the Board of Public Welfare.

New Alliance Is Reported

armed. Two hundred rifles and some machine guns were seized at Diredawa. Postal and railway services were being put in order there, schools were reopened with Italian Black Shirts for teachers.

A police commissioner was installed at Jijiga.

Stefani (Italian) News Agency figures showed the last fighting in the Harar advance left 24 officers of Somali troops dead or wounded, and 18 Italian soldiers and 810 Somali Dubats dead or wounded.

Dr. Avenol said tonight, "I only know the Italians have left Geneva. The length and nature of this absence I do not know. The Italians gave no explanation of their departure."

Joseph Paul-Boncour, French minister of state, said Aloisi told him, "We are going because of the general situation."

The Locarno powers—Britain, France and Belgium—faced with Italy's non-co-opperation, announced they "recognized the feasibility of postponing a decision (on Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland) until a later meeting." Aloisi had refused to attend this session, which was marked by gloom.

The Ethiopian delegate, Wolde Mariam, urged the council to condemn Italy's annexation of Ethiopia. He demanded that the League invoke military sanctions.

Two Latin-American States, Chile and Ecuador, launched a campaign to lift sanctions, but actually a number of delegates expressed the opinion that today's resolution was not stiff enough.

Berlin Parley Denied.

Berlin, May 12 (AP).—Both the Wilhelmstrasse and Italian sources declined today to admit that a secret exchange of views between Italy and Germany had taken place here.

A foreign office spokesman said he doubted the report, "as a matter of such high political importance" would have been handled by Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath. Von Neurath has been out of Berlin, returning only today. Reichsfuehrer Hitler also is out of the capital.

Considerable attention, however, has been paid by the Nazis to the Italian minister of agriculture, Rossoni, who recently spent ten days in Germany on a "study tour." He was received in the provinces by local leaders and on one occasion by the Reichschancellor.

Italians, however, said the trip had no political meaning.

Farms Will Grow Autos of Future, Henry Ford Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Mich., May 12.—A day in the not far distant future when "we may grow most of an automobile on the farm" was visioned today by Henry Ford.

In a brief interview after a luncheon that opened the second Dearborn conference on agriculture, industry and, science, Ford said the possibilities of plastics which can be made from farm products for use in industry are "the greatest in the world."

Just as fiber gears have been found superior to metal gears in some moving parts, other plastics offer the possibility of substitution for steel in the manufacture of automobiles, he said, thus turning industry to the farm instead of metal mines for its raw material.

The Ford Co. now has in operation a number of small manufacturing plants located near water power sites to turn agricultural waste materials into tough, strong, but easily molded substitutes for metal, Ford said.

Palestine Riots Laid To Italian Fomenters

London, May 12 (AP).—The Daily Herald said tonight Italian agents may be responsible for recent disturbances in Palestine which resulted in reinforcement of British troops in the Holy Land.

The object of the agitation, the newspaper asserted, was to embarass the British government in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian war by starting up hostility among the Arabs.

Italian money has been spent freely to achieve this object, the paper said.

Action of U. S. In Addis Ababa Riot Explained

House Hears Official of State Department; Mrs. Rogers Scores Hull.

By the Associated Press.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee—with a resolution pending before it demanding information on the handling of American interests in Ethiopia during the conflict there—yesterday summoned before it a State Department official.

He was Wallace Murry, chief of the department's Division of Near Eastern Affairs. His appearance followed by a day a 3,000-word letter from Secretary Hull to the committee explaining this Government's treatment of the situation arising out of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict and the rioting at Addis Ababa.

The committee, after hearing Murray, adjourned until today, when other State Department officials were expected to be interviewed.

As the committee met, Augusto Rossi, the Italian ambassador, called at the State Department formally to notify Secretary Hull of Italy's annexation of Ethiopia.

In view of that official pronouncement it now will be necessary for Secretary Hull to determine what attitude the United States Government will take in recognizing, or not recognizing, the alleged transfer of sovereignty from Emperor Haile Selassie to King Victor Emmanuel.

Dissatisfied with the letter from Hull outlining all steps taken by the State department to protect Americans and their interests in Ethiopia, Representative Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, author of the resolution demanding complete information, continued to press for more detailed data.

Hull's explanation, the Congresswoman asserted, was "a confession of weakness."

"Too much dependence was placed on Great Britain," Mrs. Rogers declared yesterday, "not only for supplies and shelter in time of trouble, but for men to protect against the looters."

The United States was not willing to ask permission from the Emperor for armed guards for the legation, she asserted, while the British—refused permission—sent in sufficient officers and men to assure their legation's safety.

Secretary Hull had said certain nations have "spheres of influence" in which they traditionally protect the interests of other nations in an emergency, and cited examples of the United States assisting British and other nationals.

Montgomery County Begins Monthly Pensions to the Blind

Board Votes $113 to Be Divided Among 7 Under Welfare Body's Care; Dr. V. F. Ellicott Reports on Orthopedic Clinic.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
9213 Clark Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, SHepherd 2363.

Monthly payments of pensions to the blind were started in Montgomery County yesterday when the board of county commissioners authorized the payment of $113 per month to the county welfare board for the seven blind pensioners now under the board's care. The pensions will be disbursed by the welfare board and 50 per cent of the amount expended will be returned to the county by the Federal Government, the commissioners were told by Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary of the welfare board.

The commissioners, at their weekly meeting at Rockville, also voted to turn over to the welfare board the proceeds of the State relief taxes due the county for the administration of old-age pensions.

Per diem payments to the Montgomery County General Hospital in Sandy Spring, for county patients, was increased from $1.76 to $2.75 after the board voted down a request of hospital officials for $3.75 per day.

Permission was granted to the Washington suburban sanitary commission to purchase $100,000 worth of sanitary commission bonds for the commission's sinking fund.

Ask Road Money.

Mayor Douglas M. Blandford and Town Councilman Edgar Reed, of Rockville, appeared before the commissioners to request financial assistance in connection with the proposed paving of Monroe street adjacent to the Richard Montgomery High School in Rockville.

After hearing the project explained, the commissioners voted to pay one-half of the cost of paving a section of the roadway approximately 875 feet long, within the town of Rockville, at an estimated cost of $3,650.

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, submitted his monthly report for April, in which he announced that a successful orthopedic clinic has been held and plans are under way to establish a clinic for social diseases in the suburban county. At his request, Commissioner Frank H. Karn was named to confer with the health department this week concerning the department's budget for the ensuing fiscal year.

A delegation of 42 residents of the upper county appeared before the board to urge improvement of the highway between Damascus and Ridgeville, after which the board directed a letter to the State Roads Commission asking that a 2-mile section of the highway be paved as soon as possible.

The board also set a hearing on the application of J. Fairfax Conrad for a permit to establish a garbage disposal incinerator at Chevy Chase Lake, for Monday, June 15, at 7:30 p. m. at the Bethesda County Building.

The final meeting of the season of the art department in the Takoma Park Women's Club will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Frederick Hawkes, 115 Takoma avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Following the luncheon a talk on Javanese arts and crafts will be held at the home of Mrs. Minnie Frost Rands, 1430 Floral street, Takoma Park, D. C., who lived in Java several years. There will also be an exhibit of native objects. Those in charge of the meeting are Mrs. Edward S. Widdifield, Mrs. Robert Lake and Mrs. Edmund Fraser.

Dangerous Drifting.

If members of the House District Committee have information leading to a suspicion of irregularities and petty graft in Washington's penal institution, it is their duty to conduct an investigation. Prisons are a fertile field for intrigue. At the same time their efficient management is of the utmost importance to the community. Even flimsy complaints of irregularities ought to be thoroughly scrutinized.

It should be obvious to Congressmen who are planning to question officials of the Board of Public Welfare and the penal institutions, however, that they and their colleagues are partially responsible for any unsatisfactory conditions that may be exposed. Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of penal institutions, is considerably beyond the retirement age. The Board of Public Welfare asked for his replacement a year ago. The efforts of politicians, including a number of Congressmen, to dictate the appointment of his successor have prevented any action whatever.

Under these circumstances the District's penal system is obviously just drifting. With Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, conducting an intensive campaign for appointment as Capt. Barnard's successor, factional differences might well have been anticipated. It will be difficult for the Board of Public Welfare to remove these elements of friction until a new superintendent of penal institutions has been appointed.

The board nominated Harold E. Donnell, superintendent of Maryland's penal institutions, to succeed Capt. Barnard. Political pressure upon the District Commissioners has prevented his appointment. This stalemate for which members of Congress are largely responsible clearly overshadows any evidence of irregularities yet revealed. The greatest service which could be rendered Washington's penal system would be the removal of this interference so that the local government could function.

Certainly this is one instance in which the Commissioners should take a tip from the Budget Bureau and show a little more aggression. If Mr. Donnell is not the best choice that can be made on a basis of merit, the Commissioners ought to reveal their objections to him and ask the Board of Public Welfare for another nomination. With the House District Committee preparing for an investigation of the city's penal institutions, further delay would be inexcusable.

Shakespeare In Cellophane.

Nowadays it takes more than an announcement of Shakespeare in new dress to start a run on book store or ticket office. King Lear has been brought out in dull leather and paper back; the Merchant of Venice has seen the light of day in boudoir and children's editions; and the Shrew has been effectively tamed numbers of times by both Douglas Fairbanks and Alfred Lunt. Collectors of Shakespeareana merely yawn to learn that The Tempest may be purchased in a teapot version.

It has remained for Hollywood to renovize the Bard of Avon properly. Romeo and Juliet and, in fact, all members of the Houses of Montague and Capulet now look at the world through a cellophane jacket. The cover of this motion-picture edition of the famous lovers' story carries no coin-like profiles of sturdy Verona youths. Instead Miss Norma Shearer gazes down at Mr. Leslie Howard from the 1936 model of a Renaissance balcony, a credit both to the Capulets of Italy and the carpenters of California. Profuse illustrations throughout the volume indicate that Miss Shearer, after much research and many trips to the beauty parlor, now looks far more like Juliet than Juliet herself.

Shakespeare, like most playwrights, was given to extensive marginal jottings. "Sennets" and "flourishes" in his own handwriting have added value to more than one collector's item. But it is doubtful if even he would have understood the script held on this presentation of Romeo and Juliet. "Exeunt" wrote Shakespeare simply to denote the end of this tragic play. In Hollywoodese this has been translated into "LONG SHOT—City of Verona. Music and the far-away sound of bells growing fainter and fainter as we FADE OUT."

It can only be hoped that the picture, when finally released, will be a true version of Romeo and Juliet and not an unintended modernization of the Comedy of Errors.

Aftermath In Japan.

The death sentence imposed by a secret military court-martial in Japan on Lieut. Col. Saburo Aizawa for the murder last August of Lieut. Gen. Tetsuzau Nagata, director of the military affairs bureau in the war office, is a striking departure from the practice that has hitherto prevailed in the island empire with regard to political assassinations.

Apparently last February's uprising of the young extremists in the army shocked the Japanese authorities out of their customary complacence regarding such acts. In the past patriotic murders, while regretted, were nevertheless excused on the ground that the motives behind them were noble and praiseworthy. The assassins were held up by the jingo press, by large sections of the public and by the courts as heroes rather than murderers. The courtrooms where such assassins were tried became the rostrums for the propagation of the views of the patriotic gunmen and when convicted they were usually let off with very light sentences.

How costly this tolerance of patriotic assassins has been can be seen in the fact that three of the last five premiers of Japan have been the victims of the wrath of military patriots, and a fourth, Keisuke Okada, escaped only because the assassins mistook his brother-in-law for him and shot the latter.

The turn in the tide was clearly reflected in the sudden change that took place, after February, in the conduct of the trial of Lieut. Col. Aizawa. Up to that time the trial had dragged on interminably, being little more than a Fascist mass meeting with the accused and his supporters dominating the court and its procedure. When the February uprising had been put down the authorities decided to clean house.

The judge who had presided over the Aizawa trial was dismissed on the ground that he had been too easy-going and sympathetic toward the accused. A court-martial was appointed to conclude the case in secret. It has found Lieut. Col. Aizawa guilty and has imposed the death penalty. Possibly this may be commuted to imprisonment but the indication is clear that the days of tolerance of political assassins are over.

It may also mean the progressive curbing of the independence which the militarists have hitherto enjoyed. Writing after the events of February, Mr. Frank Hedges, Tokyo correspondent of The Post, declared that one result of the failure of the coup would be a rebirth of liberalism in Japan. His predictions appear to be on the way to fulfilment.

Close on the heels of the conviction of Lieut. Col. Aizawa there comes the news of the condemnation by Foreign Minister Arita and Eiju Amau, the foreign office spokesman, of a jingoist book, "Japan Must Fight England," by a retired naval officer, Lieut. Comdr. Tota Ishimaru. Mr. Arita in denouncing the work predicted that a bill would soon be introduced giving the authorities greater power to prevent such publications. Mr. Amau described the work as "irresponsible nonsense." When civil officials in Japan begin to talk that way about the jingoist writings of army or navy officers the outlook in Japan for liberalism becomes encouraging.

An Ominous Tendency.

If viewed as an isolated incident, this week's siege of WPA headquarters by a group of crippled men and women seeking concessions from that agency might be dismissed without a thought beyond its pathetic side. Since the episode follows close upon somewhat similar events in Trenton and St. Louis, however, officials clearly can no longer temporize with such tactics in the hope that they will not be repeated.

The siege conducted by New York's League for the Physically Handicapped arouses sympathy because of the plight of individuals in the group. It would be a terrible indictment of our civilization to ignore the petitions of helpless men and women. Certainly they should be granted the necessities of life, and if no other agency can assume that responsibility the Federal Government must do so. But full recognition of the difficulties of these individuals, and of the desirability of granting them relief, does not in any respect excuse an attempt to coerce the Government.

Washington is familiar with the procedure of intimidation from organized minorities. The bonus marches of a few years ago brought numerous groups here for the avowed purpose of compelling Congress to enact legislation in their behalf. Since the New Deal adopted the practice of appropriating money for the President to spend at his discretion, its administrative agencies have naturally become the target of demonstrations, picketing and outright threats. The occupation of official quarters by disgruntled groups is merely a further step in the same direction. This strategy is based on the assumption that if organized groups can create sufficient annoyance, the government will capitulate to them.

In too many instances the Administration has inclined toward surrender to factions of this sort. To draw upon District relief funds to feed and lodge such petitioners is not only grossly unfair to the unemployed of Washington; it also encourages other groups to come here with programs of impossible demands. The care of cripples who are unable to provide for themselves is so clearly a community problem that Harry Hopkins could not possibly take it over without destroying the last vestige of local self-reliance in the field of relief.

Even more serious than the distortion of governmental functions, however, is the overt threat to orderly democratic procedure. The intimidation of Government officials by minority factions is a move toward revolution. For if these groups should find that they can bulldoze officials, their demands would tend to increase and others would hasten to employ the same tactics.

So long as only a handful of cripples lay siege to WPA headquarters talk of revolutionary tendencies sounds highly exaggerated. But it is the break down of principle that is important. No Administration can knuckle under to militant factions employing coercive methods without progressively abandoning its right to be called a government.

Two excuses for the elimination of all Alley Dwelling Authority funds from the deficiency appropriations bill are being offered by conscience-stricken apologists for the House's action. First, it is said that an economy wave is sweeping over Congress, which is certainly news. Second, a number of Congressmen believe that it would be good politics to eliminate this item in an election year. Of course, these two "explanations" are very closely related.

The association of economy with this unwarranted attack upon the local slum reclamation program is ridiculous. The $300,000 requested for this purpose by the Budget Bureau was stricken from a bill appropriating $2,364,229,712, most of which is set aside for the WPA. As this swollen relief measure was passed by the House, Representative Bacon estimated that the burden of caring for the unemployed "might be reduced by half by the single act of purging the Federal relief machinery of political patronage."

The House did nothing to reduce this waste, but it voted to cripple an efficient agency which is reclaiming Washington's disgraceful alleys, and thus creating really useful employment with little or no ultimate cost to taxpayers. "Economy" of this sort is a fraud that bears no relationship whatever to the objective of a balanced budget.

It is much nearer the truth to assume that this blow to the ADA was in part a cheap political gesture. Some members of the House feel the necessity of showing their constituents evidence of economy at the expense of others. Since very few votes are cast by Destrict residents, the local Alley Dwelling Authority was cast in the role of victim. The very constructive work that agency is doing was blandly ignored. On the other hand, it is probable that many who voted for this "economy" did not realize that it would wreck one of the most promising experiments in the entire field of local housing projects.

Senator Capper promises that every effort will be made to save the alley reclamation program in the Senate. It is unthinkable that Congress as a body would knowingly approve such an outrageous act of sabotage. The Senate may properly take it for granted that the House acted in ignorance. By restoring the Budget Bureau's estimate for the ADA, along with a provision reappropriating unexpended funds now available, the Senate Appropriations Committee would give the House an opportunity to recede gracefully from a position that could not be justified to any audience, in any part of the country.

To Mend The Lute.

Fairfax Oyster's request that his application for use of the Water Gate be withdrawn injects a new and welcome note into the confusion over sunset concerts during the coming summer. Having been informed that the National Symphony Association has now definitely decided to proceed with plans to repeat last summer's concerts at the same site, Mr. Oyster will no longer stand in the way. With this graceful retreat, the proposal to recruit another orchestra to provide Washington with open-air music becomes a dead issue.

Doubts as to the availability of the Navy barge and its sounding board meanwhile having been cleared up, only the differences between the National Symphony directors and the local musicians' union now remain. The status of the out-of-town players brought in to supplement the city's local talent is questioned by the union; the dismissal of the personnel manager does not sit well with the orchestra association. But neither can be an insurmountable difficulty. Perhaps a bit of Mr. Oyster's generous understanding, on the part of both the union and the association, will completely mend Washington's popular lute.

"Republicans everywhere should be optimistic . . ." begins an editorial by a Republican who seems to be entirely too optimistic, judging by his use of the word "everywhere."

Modern Melodists.

Doron K. Antrim in Scribner's Magazine.

Very few popular composers go in for higher branches of the craft, such as orchestration. The prevailing school of thought is that the study of harmony, counterpoint, orchestration would cramp the creative impulse. George Gershwin believed this at one time, and some of the best effects in his "Rhapsody in Blue" were due to Ferde Grofe, who scored the work for orchestra. . . .

Every major band has a staff of about six arrangers, specialists in various rhythm styles. Paul Whiteman's arranging bill has run as high as $50,000 a year. Andre Kostelanetz can easily spend $2,000 a week on arrangements, and $500 a week is an average for smaller bands.

For Susan B. Anthony.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mothers certainly get their innings on Mother's Day as evidenced again by the many tributes paid to them on the day set apart for their special recognition. A Washington columnist writes of "Mother's Day—with practically every member of Congress making speeches extolling the mothers of the land."

I think of a certain Senator whose living, breathing appreciation of motherhood is daily suggested by the red carnation he wears with distinction. Another just like him in his admirable evaluation of American womanhood united with him, in a practical application of their respect for the mothers, wives and daughters of the Nation by introducing a bill, Senate 4295, which provides for the recognition of a great woman in the Mount Rushmore National Memorial, Susan B. Anthony is the woman—the indefatigable general of the woman movement, who for more than half a century carried on her bloodless revolution against ancient custom and tradition, emancipating millions of women, which in turn freed men and children as well, from economic handicaps.

Who is Susan B. Anthony?" our young people ask. They know little or nothing of her. Shall each succeeding generation of American youth view a national memorial proclaiming there was no woman worthy of inclusion in the historic period being commemorated? That would be perpetrating a fraud on posterity. Are our men and women in Congress willing to show their appreciation of a great national character who "mothered" the entire race in her great humanitarian heart; who sacrificed wifehood and motherhood that wives and mothers might have a more abundant life? Let them establish her in her proper place in American history—a place she earned by a lifetime of service and devotion to a democratic ideal which has not yet been fully realized. PHARE PLEIGH.

Washington, May 11.

Washingtonian's Questions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are a few questions in regard to Congressman Blanton which I should like to have answered by someone:

In regard to the now well-known "Red Rider," where does the Congressman get the power to block the repeal of this infamous bill which all thinking people know should be repealed? In spite of the valiant efforts of Congressman Sisson, who is a worthy match for the Congressman from Texas and a courageous gentleman (has he not acted in defiance of the Texan's threats), the bill apparently will not even come up for a vote.

Why is the Congressman so interested in salaries of certain judges and public health doctors of the District? Is not his interest caused particularly by petty jealousy and spite against the health doctors because they dared to stand up for their rights? Perhaps an investigation into the Congressman's own large salary would be in order. His chief accomplishments seem to be the befuddling of main points of an issue, for he is a past master at political chicanery, and the releasing of hot air.

Why is the Congressman so opposed to the District receiving its requested and necessary appropriation? Here again is not the Congressman showing spite against the authorities for their attempt to place facts before the people as to their needs or is he trying to make an impression on home constituents? He persists in telling how things are being done in Abilene—with all due respect to his home town, just why does the Congressman think Washington wishes to pattern after Abilene?

It is perhaps natural that Congressman Blanton should be as he is: limited in his outlook, petty, shrewd in political ways—nothing can be done about that—but why should such outstanding and loyal citizens as the superintendent of schools, members of the board of education, the District health officer, and others, have to be humiliated frequently by venomous attacks on their integrity and ability—attacks which they are powerless by the very nature of their positions and that of the Congressman to combat? Why, in fact, should the Congressman from Texas be in charge of our District appropriation? He certainly has not the real interests of the District at heart.

M. A. WILKENSON.

Wails Of An Underdog.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Doubtless all who witnessed the laying of the cornerstone of the new Interior Building a few weeks ago reveled in the fact that our country could erect so imposing a structure—with its beautiful marble exterior, its magnificent offices for the executives and with all windows opening outwardly, thereby eliminating all injury to overworked eyes. And these comforts for executives who, at best, may not remain longer in office than through a second administration

But what of the thousands of underdogs who are doing close, hard work, and who will spend the remainder of their lives in the offices which have been allotted them upon the five narrow courts? Courts, with all windows opening upon bare walls, and with no light to work by save the electric? In view of these conditions one can but wonder at the miserly saving of space between the five courts, when land in our city is so cheap, and when daylight is so valuable for research and other close workers.

Let any worker remark against the offices assigned them, and an executive would doubtless ask the question "Why don't you resign?" And this executive, too, might be but a mere athlete just out of college, entirely inexperienced in any work of depth—an executive, too, it may be added, who will have to depend upon these workers for all the materials upon which he will base the speeches he will turn loose upon an innocent public.

In the expenditure of millions upon our vast projects, many of us are trying hopelessly to find some reason as to why the future good of our people seems to be so often lacking. Some, upon the other hand, have long since given up all hope of a reason, and are charitably attributing the lack to childlike inexperience; others, still, have become morons, and have ceased even to try to think, and are only too glad of a chance to throw their future upon any one who can handle the daily soup ladle. And there are others, still, who may have a little ray of hope left, and who are groaning inwardly: "How long, oh Lord, how long!" R. J. W.

Washington, May 10.

"An Unfinished Building."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You might find other activities and organizations to speak of as "debauchery" rather than The Post-abused WPA. With foot on the loud pedal and knee swell added, the editor roars out his music—quite discordant to some who know quite as much about the doings of the organization concerned as he does. If in remaking our shabby parks the commissioners are guilty of "vandalism," because they must first uproot before they begin to remake, then "fact" is a mere cry of the populace looking at things seen but not at things which are unseen. A builder's slogan is: "Never show to a fool an unfinished building." Objectors to much that is now being done both in parks and in work under WPA and PWA might take this slogan as a suggestive hint.

From knowledge which is not confined to Washington City, but is Nation wide in its sweep, some of us know that what Mr. Hopkins is doing has given new heart and new hope to thousands. It is giving them stepping stones to work outside Governmental activities. Men and women who make good in WPA activity are soon discovered and sought. And they are legion.

If the Editor of The Post would loud pedal genuine waste, let him see the billions now being used to debauch our citizens, with a pitiable revenue received in return. If Mr. Hopkins is debauching the people, pray let us have some more of his ilk. T. O. KNOTT.

Washington, May 8.

"Not All Cranks."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. E. B. Henderson and others who approve what the planners in their wisdom have done to the parks seem to think all who object are doddering old-timers saturated with sentiment (and for that reason seemingly not entitled to an opinion) and miscellaneous cranks.

As a matter of fact, very superficial inquiry uncovers the dumb acts committed by the park group have met objection from all ages and classes, including some of the 107,000 outsiders who never saw the town until the New Deal spoils system began to dole out the deficit.

Problem of 'Latch String' Children

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The problem of solving delinquency by means of supervised recreation is again being presented to us in the effort to organize boys' clubs, especially where the need is greatest.

One mistake that is very prevalent is to presume that the suburbs do not need recreational facilities because of open and undeveloped country. Children cannot play baseball in briar patches or in woods. All undeveloped land not in use is either covered by woods or bushes. Supervision and guidance to develop character is just as necessary for the suburban child as for the city dweller. We fear many confuse the conditions of the farms and the suburbs. On the farms the parents are both there to guide their children and train them in the work of the farm. But in our suburban sections, where the working classes live, in many homes both parents are employed some distance from the home and their children are sometimes designated as "latch string children," as they carry the key to their home on a string around their necks. These unfortunate children are well dressed and fed, but lack the parental guidance so necessary after school hours.

To find a solution of this acute problem, a conference was held in Burrville School auditorium on May 5, by parents of high and trade school children, school officials and the clergy. About 300 citizens were present at this Far Northeast Conference who attacked the problem with critical analysis and sympathetic interest. Definite results are promised as resolutions were passed, and a committee was appointed with Mr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools as chairman, to hold a further conference with parents, school officials, officials of the Capital Transit Co. and representatives of our citizens' associations.

A boys' club has been organized for the Far Northeast, but is seriously handicapped by lack of any adequate recreational facilities east of the Anacostia River, and by lack of equipment in the Burrville community center. This center is now open only two evenings each week. It should be open six evenings each week.

We must find money somewhere for temporary recreational facilities for this summer and permanent recreational facilities after that. We are hoping for some money for playgrounds in the urgency deficiency bill now in Congress.

This territory is not traversed by any of the through highway routes, and being out of sight, is sadly neglected by the officials. Too much money is spent on the show places in Washington and too little for necessary improvements where the poorer people live.

HOWARD D. WOODSON, Chairman Far Northeast Conference.

The Post Impressionist

Where Time Is Streamlined

Postoffice, Wednesday.

IF THE Einsteinites admit that time has even any relative reality, won't they argue that the pace of time varies in various geographical divisions of the world? Won't these philosophers contend that the years move in more leisurely manner in Ecuador, for instance, than—for instance—in Italy?

Your Post-Impressionist, anyhow, is prepared to defend such a thesis.

He will go further. He can prove that, while the clock seems to tick forward for all of us at an equal advance of 60 seconds to the minute, the progress of the calendar is far swifter in some arts and industries than in others.

By the way of demonstration, we respectfully refer you to the motion-picture.

* * *

The most modernistic of historians may call the Eighteen-Eighties "a short while ago"—and get away with it. But among the movie makers, players, critics and audiences, a week is a century: anything that happened ten years ago is "away back in the old days of 1926."

There is a popular delusion that one of the best newsreels is "The March of Time." Philosophically speaking, the march of time is a cinematic impossibility, a screen contradiction in terms.

* * *

Consider the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art: This institution, though suffering under the misfortune of a New York address, has a national significance. It sends its collection all over our country. One of its missions is the preservation of the motion-picture's past. At its home in West Fifty-third street, the F. L. of M. of M. A. gives re-showings of films which form a part of the movies' elder history. And the latest re-showing dealt with the Genesis of the Talkies.

Away back to that!

The examples were dated from 1927 to 1930.

* * *

We aren't trying to say that talkies, of one sort or another, aren't really old. Let's be clear. The endeavor to link sound with sight began almost as soon as the movie itself.

* * *

Scarcely had Edison invented the kinetoscope than he harnessed some of his machines to a phonograph and little earphones, so that the watcher could hear music appropriate—well, more or less appropriate! — to the vision of the peepshow. But the attachment went unappreciated.

Within a few years after pictures were first projected to a screen—to wit, 1900—there were "talkies" at the Paris Exposition. But what talkies! The voice of Coquelin creaked from a primitive phonograph, while on the screen appeared the great comedian "in the act of delivering the speech one heard."

Then, in 1912, came the Edison kinetophone: behind the screen, and connected with the projector by a fishline, was—again—a phonograph uttering the text of the play. But the synchronization left about everything to be desired.

* * *

Real talkies couldn't come until after the solution of the problem of amplifying sound. And then, for a while, there was a long way still to go.

* * *

The Warner Brothers were the pioneers, and August 6, 1926, was the date of the first public performance: "Don Juan"—with John Barrymore!—silent, but having a synchronized musical accompaniment; some brief musical and dialogue pictures, and a speech by Will H. Hays. Although the speech was a good speech, it wasn't any more improved, to our mind, by the methods of transmission than were the other features. We called the whole sound-program guttural gurglings.

"But," Will told us, "it's a beginning of something really big. You wait and see—or hear."

* * *

Of course he was right.

In the May of 1927 the Fox people brought out their Movietone Newsreel—that was something. And—what was much, what was a whole lot—on October 5 of the same year "The Jazz Singer" was released, the dauntless Pennsylvania-born Warner Brothers again pioneering, but none of them present to enjoy its Broadway triumph: worn out by overwork, Sam Warner had died only the day before.

All very well to say, as some critics do, that "The Jazz Singer" was mainly a silent film with subtitles. All very well to say, as your Post-Impressionist still does, that the opening of this new screen chapter might better have been entrusted to finer spirits than Al Jolson's and May McAvoy's. The production did contain four dialogue-and-song sequences, and it was the practical beginning of the talkie of today.

* * *

However, our present point is that, in the film field, this is all considered ancient history: "The Jazz Singer" (1927), "Steamboat Willie" (1928), together with "All Quiet on the Western Front" (1930), "Considered," did we say? They are ancient history—there.

Great Britain Tries Sulking

Collapse Of Ethiopia Requires England To Reset Goal.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE FLIGHT of Haile Selassie and the Italian entry into Addis Ababa have thrown British public opinion into the utmost confusion. Within a very short time we shall have to decide what our attitude is to be to the League, and yet never have the virtues of so many contradictory policies been so evident. The news of the flight produced the deepest depression, out of which no one has shown an escape. For the moment our prophets are continuing in their expected strains, but in most of them there are apparent signs of indecision.

Proposals before the public divide themselves into three groups—those based upon complete vindication of the League, even after Italian victory in Africa; those aimed at forgetting the present crisis as quickly as possible and reconstructing some new sort of League; and those aimed at burial of the League once and for all.

League Supporters Do Not Hesitate At War.

The ideal course in the eyes of fervent League supporters is to apply all sanctions against Italy, blockade the Suez Canal from the Red Sea end, the Mediterranean from outside Gibraltar, prepare to stop Italy by war. After Italy has succumbed to force of arms, the League must introduce a new government in Abyssinia, possibly under Haile Selassie, with a mandate system, and the League members might well seize the opportunity to pool their crown colonies under international mandate at the same time. This policy involoves acceptance of the principle that the League's prime function is not to maintain peace at all costs, but to enforce international justice; the League must be prepared to fight for its principles. Further, the League must accept the obligations of sovereignty in governing mandated lands, and League members must not be squeamish about the downfall of Mussolini and fascism in Italy.

There are many objections raised to this policy. The flight of Haile Selassie seems to have removed the aim of League intervention; people argue that you cannot intervene to protect a King and government which no longer exist. This is not of course the principle involved; the League is required to intervene not to support Abyssinia, but to punish Italy for law-breaking; but it is a strong inducement nevertheless for many nations to decline any further action. Secondly, it would almost certainly be impossible to get the nations at Geneva to agree to such action, even if Britain were prepared to take the lead. And thirdly, it would be impossible at this stage for the present government in England to convert the public to the idea of a League war, even if it were converted itself. Six months ago it might have been possible; but now it is too late.

Further, it is objected that Germany might take the opportunity while Britain and France were occupied with Italy to seize Austria or the German parts of Czechoslovakia; war against Italy might become war in the whole of Europe. This is an obvious possibility. France would not consider supporting Britain against Italy without specific guarantees of British support in the event of German attack. These Britain would give. But France would also want guarantees if Germany should secure Austria, not by invasion, but by a provoked Nazi rising inside Austria, followed by an Austrian vote to join Germany. These Britain would not give, since she is inclined to agree that at some time or other such a union is bound to be formed. The possibility of such action by Germany is probably overestimated; there are many reasons for expecting Germany to side with the League against Italy; but the mere possibility is sufficient to prevent France from co-operating with Britain against Italy.

Others Recommend Face-Saving Tactics.

SECOND, general solution is not to stregthen sanctions in order to vindicate the League, but to maintain those at present in force, in order to save its face. Sanctions are to be maintained until economic necessity or natural grace induces Mussolini to submit his peace terms to the League for symbolic approval. It may well suit Mussolini to adopt such a course, since it would purify his return to the European comity as a member of the League in good standing, and at the same time would make the League his humble rubber stamp. The League would pretend to save its face by calling Italian rule in Abyssinia a League mandate and would then retire to consider its future constitution.

It is objected in answer to this scheme that many of the nations will not be willing to continue sanctions; that the League is defeated and had better not go out of the way to prostrate itself before Mussolini, and that Mussolini may not even agree to so limited an exercise of authority by the League, which would therefore ultimately be forced to an abject climb-down. The counter argument is that continued sanctions may force Mussolini to submit; but in that case he will not go down without a fight, which means that the League must be prepared to carry out the first proposal.

Admit League Failure, A Third Proposal.

A THIRD possibility is, admit defeat of the present League, set to work to make a new one. Proposals for the new League vary as much as programs for the present one. One suggestion is that the League, its scope confined entirely to Europe, with or without Italy, should have powers to take military action immediately any member commits an act of aggression, or prepares to commit one. This strengthening would be designed to correct the ridiculous situation in the Abyssinian affair, when the League sat by debating until Italy had fired a gun in Abyssinia, and took no steps to prevent that agression during the long period when Italy was moving troops to Africa.

"Keep out of trouble."

Another proposal is to reform the League without any military powers of compulsion, so that it becomes merely a persuasive body. In this case nations would no longer rely on collective security but would return to specific alliances. Thus a very prominent group in England wants to remove the League military powers; allow Germany to rearm, have colonies, guarantee the peace of Europe, and maintain British and German friendship, in the hope that Britain may reform Germany's character, make it less vicious, more democratic.

And still another scheme for reform suggests a League dominated by France, Britain, Russia and satellites to overawe the rest of Europe.

Retreat From Geneva Urged In Some Quarters.

FOURTH main proposal is that Britain should do her best at Geneva to secure extended sanctions against Italy, in the full knowledge that her appeal will fail; should then retire from Geneva, not to isolation, but to her traditional policy of watching at a distance, intervening in Europe only to prevent any one power securing hegemony. Advocates of this scheme maintain that Britain has nothing to fear from war in Europe for a very long time, if ever; that expansion of Germany into Austria and Czechoslovakia need not perturb us; that it is not our affair if Germany attacks Russia; that, in short, we shall be able to keep our distance and cultivate our empire in security.

All the above proposals postulate that Italy will be satisfied by her Abyssinian conquests, and that she will not offer any threat to the empire. The opposite is much more probable. Mussolini's ambitions are not limited to a collection of Abyssinian deserts, but extend to Egypt, Palestine, the whole of the old Roman Empire. Those who believe this to be Mussolini's ambition urge that Britain cannot afford to allow League sanctions to fail. We must maintain sanctions at all costs, at the penalty of having to face Italy single handed within a very short time on a straight imperial issue.

Mr. H. G. Wells has recently emphasized an inherent contradiction in most of these proposas for solution of Europe's difficulties; they attempt to produce an international solution without modifying national rights in the slightest. If is as the Federal Government at Washington were expected to fulfil all its functions, with all powers reserved to the several States. A solution is only possible if national sovereighty is modified at least in certain essential directions, such as military rights to wage war, and conditions of economic organization. If every country in Europe insists upon full sovereign rights, then the League can do nothing, has no existence, is doomed to failure. And the root of the trouble is that all our individual prejudices and traditions have become colored with nationalism, while our devotion to international principles is intellectual, and almost abhorrent to our more ngrained traditions.

British Mix Nationalism With Internationalism.

THIS DIFFICULTY is very pronounced with the British people; our island state, removed from everyday contact with peoples of other nations, tends to confirm our nationalism, and most of our ideals of conduct have been crystallized in the standards of the British gentleman, which to us is synonymous with Christian gentleman. Because our trading and economic organization brought some of us into contact with the outside world, because our surplus population has inhabited so many new lands, built so many new nations, because we are dependent upon international trade for our standard of living, if not for our very lives, we have strong inclinations toward international organization.

Our rational belief in the necessity for a world order prevents us at present from purely nationalist war against Italy in defense of our threatened Empire; but our in born nationalism and pride of Empire prevents us from surrendering such signs of national power as are necessary to create an effective world order. And recent tendencies toward economic self-sufficiency have revived and strengthened our Little Englandism, so that at the tragic moment when a proclamation of fait his most necessary we are inclined to falter.

This hesitation is very apparent in England at the present. Our League supporters who refuse to be daunted by Mussolini's successes would like events to move something like this: Eden, they suggest, should demand League war against Italy. If the government refuses to support this demand, he should resign, as indeed he should have done from their point of view last autumn. His resignation would split the Conservative Party. Baldwin would have to go, and would be replaced, not by a left-wing government, but by a Conservative government further to the right, led possibly by Neville Chamberlin, possibly by Winston Churchill.

This would throw into opposition a considerable group of left wing Conservatives led by Eden, and would provide the nucleus of a new center party which would be a vigorous competitor for active politicians with our moribund Liberal and Labor parties, and would before long replace the right wing Conservative government, which in the meantime might have set about attacking Mussolini, if only from imperial motives.

The trouble with this argument is partly that Eden is not the man to make such a stand. He has done extremely well in the most difficult circumstances, but has not the ambition to become a new political leader. But in any case the public is tending to solve its difficulty by asking what is the use of further League action. The League has failed, and it doesn't matter now who was to blame, France or England, Laval or Baldwin; what we must do is keep out of trouble. Both those who don't know what to do, and those who are not prepared to do what they see should be done, are becoming disillusioned and apathetic.

We are inclined to solution by sulking; and since this is approximately Mr. Baldwin's policy, he may find himself strengthened in office rather than weakened by the collapse of the League policy to which his government has paid lip service.

League Failure Finds Nation Apathetic As To Future.

Public Libraries

By William Lyon Phelps.

Aid To Harassed.

I wonder if all of us realize, during these tragic years of depression, the enormous value of our public libraries, and the immense help to individuals that is being furnished by our librarians?

For innumerable people out of employment and for thousands of others who have been suffering, our American public libraries have given both solace and stimulation. A prominent librarian tells me that many American men and women have "voluntarily testified to us that books have actually saved their sanity in this time of mental strain, helping them to forget for a few hours the urgent problems that awaited them outside the covers of the books they held in their hands. Books in public libraries were one of the few free commodities left available to those, who, through no fault of their own, were stripped of all resources and dreams."

* * * *

During these months and years of enforced leisure, the public libraries have helped immensely in educating and diverting hundreds of thousands; they have also served practically in helping to prepare men and women for their work when an opportunity to perform it will return.

Now it would be a serious error to reduce appropriations for public libraries in cities and towns, and yet in a number of cases this has been done. Never were libraries needed more than now. Never were they of greater value to the individual and to the cause of civilization.

Tourist In Germany

It was bound to happen, you'll admit. But nevertheless it is surprising when you pick up such an excellent brief guide book as I. Burrow's "The Intelligent Traveler's Guide to Germany" (Knight, 35 cents), to come upon such cool adjurations as these. Shades of Baedeker!

"A word of caution as to your conduct in the country. If you wish to avoid all difficulties, remember to snap to attention whenever the 'Horst Wessel' song is sung, and to thrust up your arm in the Nazi salute whenever, as will happen more frequently than you realize, a military parade or a Brown Shirt demonstration passes. Your stay in Germany will be free from difficulties if, in advance, you will practice stiff Nazi salutes to the swastika, and respectful postures before goose-stepping parades.

"If you are a Jew, or are of Jewish descent, or have even a remotely Jewish ancestor * * * or if your dark features or facial characteristics can, by any stretch of the imagination, lead you to be regarded as one of Jewish descent * * * you must be prepared for embarrassments, refusals of service, and public insults."

* * * *

And you had better be extremely careful of any printed matter you happen to bring into Germany. "Such publications as the New York Times, the London Times, Harper's Magazine, Time Magazine, Nation or Foreign Affairs may be confiscated and their possession expose you to considerable trouble." These are not, one presumes, the sort of items put forward in the travel literature of the North German Lloyd.

Nor is the rest of Mr. Burrows' guide book—divided by towns, pithily presented—without its cognizance of the new Germany. You will want, he says, to visit the Brahms birthplace in Hamburg; note the address, 60 Speckstrasse; well—it is no longer in the official German guide-books. Three years ago the Nazi government racial office discovered (one can imagine with what glee!) that Brahms had a Jewish grandfather, and you can guess what happened then.

You can have a nice and admiring time in Germany, implies Mr. Burrows, if you will take care to look at the quaint medieval houses, the lovely forests, the romantic Rhine scenery, and certain peasant costumes. The rest, shall we say, is silence.

* * * *

But John L. Spivak was not that kind of a tourist. The man who exposed as forgeries the so-called "Whalen Documents," which the former police commissioner of New York employed to bring radicals and liberals into disrepute, who showed the conditions of Southern chain-gangs in "Georgia Nigger," who wrote "America Faces the Barricades" with integrity and passionate sympathy for the under dog, and who, in a world full of "greatest American reporters," is considered by the competent as being pretty well at the top of the heap—he was no man to sit over a bock and admire a castle.

When he went to Europe for six months, last year, Mr. Spivak wanted to know how the underdog fares in these perilous parts. And he found out. "Europe Under the Terror" (Simon & Schuster, $2.50) is first-rate picture painting ofthe sheer unliveableness of life in the Fascist countries—slashingly drawn, sharply colored, immediately revealing of "a Europe the largest part of which is swept by terror and tyranny, misery and starvation, a Europe where, in the main, opposition to the ruling regime is prohibited by imprisonment and death."

* * * *

Italy, where "La Madama smiles" (where police politely pluck a man out of his life and off to the dungeons); Poland, where thunder reverberates from the lower depths; Czechoslovakia, non-Fascist, but where hunger among the goiterous peasants of the Carpathian-Russ section is even worse than under any dictator; Austria, with its misery and petty reforms—these are all covered in Mr. Spivak's pages.

But it is the German chapters which concern me now (John M. Clark is reviewing the Italian aspect of the book on this Sunday's Book Page). And the keynote is this, in the words of a foreign diplomat stationed in Berlin: "The Nazi regime is what you call in your country a 'racket' * * * It is a gang of gangsters the world recognizes as the government of Germany."

In other words, Mr. Spivak found Germany under a universal process of "shakedown," complete with "protection money," collectors and strong-arm men. At the top it is fairly subtle. Hitler's "Mein Kampf," national required reading, has brought him royalties of at least $800,000. His newspaper, the Voelkische Beobachter, in Berlin, increased its advertising 15 times, at bonanza rates, as soon as the idea was grasped that an ad in the Fuehrer's organ meant friendly eyes from the Nazis.

* * * *

And under the leaders, the Brown Shirts collect "protection money" from every enterprise, high and low, except the farmers. One of the most delicious items is Mr. Spivak's eyewitness account of the bargaining between a Brown Shirt and an American business man over "protection money."

"One thousand marks is not much for a business like this," said the Nazi.

"Two hundred marks," said the American. "That's a lot of money in this country."

"Two hundred marks! It is not worth troubling about."

"Terrible to have troubled you."

"I'll tell you," went on the Nazi. "Business is not so good as it was, I know. I will talk with my superior and try to convince him that he should take 750. That is the best I can do."

But they settled on 400. The Nazi bowed himself to the door—"I am sure you will find my services satisfactory." And the American turned to Mr. Spivak. "There," he said, "goes the government of Germany."

Votes—at ANY Cost

Recently it again won first place for its health provisions over all other Eastern counties. Its parks and parkways, its schools, its department of welfare, and its recreation program are as famous as the natural beauty of its villages and its wooded hills.

As long as control of the relief problem was under local supervision, it was handled with the exceptional efficiency that characterizes most of our county efforts. Approximately 100 persons carried on the entire operation of the County Work Bureau, met every pay roll on time and maintained constant and adequate records and statistics of operations. Non-relief employes chosen on a non-political efficiency basis, were few in number, ranging from less than 1 per cent of the total pay roll up to less than 2 per cent as the total employes declined.

The morale of the relief workers was maintained through this intelligent placement, through promotion as a reward for special application and ability, and especially because the work accomplished was a valuable contribution to each community or to the county as a whole.

Then came the nightmare of the Works Progress Administration. Merely the preparation of projects according to the voluminous WPA specifications cost the county $16,521.75 before the new juggernaut could decide what it would do. Out of 119 projects submitted in September 1935, 113 were returned to the county for corrections which took at least 10 persons two weeks. Just as the corrections were completed word came from WPA that they were not needed as the original draft was preferable. As no county projects had been approved by the WPA when election day grew near and as almost no men had been put to work, Mr. Bryan, WPA director, in order to make a showing of employment, on October 29, suddenly ordered the county's Co-ordinating Committee to furnish 1,500 laborers to be shipped to a project at Bear Mountain Park across the Hudson River in another county. Special trains hauled the men from Mount Vernon into New York and thence up the Hudson, picking up other men in Yonkers, Tarrytown, and Ossining, and landing them north of Peekskill where special buses caried them to a job in Bear Mountain Park, although hundreds of useful local projects had been submitted in ample time by the cities and towns and by the county itself. Instead, while these projects made their slow and painful way through the involved procedure prerequisite to their approval, the WPA asked local officials to provide at local expense, bus transportation clear across the county to points on the Hudson River where the men could be picked up by train to be taken to work in another county. The men in some instances had to spend in travel from two to four and even more hours per day in getting to and from their work while local officials sought frantically to get approval of local projects right in their own towns.

Successful Administrators Discharged.

In order to analyze a situation so chaotic as to defy description, some of the immediate effects of WPA can be outlined as follows:

With the general take-over by the WPA of such going projects as had been approved by November 30, the State TERA naturally ordered the reduction of local work bureau staffs to the few employes necessary to wind up the affairs of the bureau and to carry on the few remaining social service projects of the TERA. This naturally resulted in the rapid layoff of the field and office forces which had so successfully carried on the local work bureau for four years. Did the WPA take advantage of the opportunity to employ these experienced workers in responsible posts in the new administration set-up? With a very few exceptions they did not. Those employes of the county work bureau who still had a relief status could not be ignored and these for the most part were given minor assignments on WPA projects at security wages. A few were taken over in minor capacities in the WPA district and zone offices. A few in self-defense sought political indorsements and were successful in landing minor supervisory jobs. A smooth-running, efficient organization which could have been taken over bodily to furnish an effective nucleus for the administration of the district was permitted to distintegrate.

The WPA, on the other hand, was manned almost exclusively by political appointees, most of them ignorant of the county's methods of work and lacking the most elementary knowledge of the positions they were to fill. Taxi drivers, barbers, promoters and what not were placed in charge of construction jobs of which they had not an inkling.

The man appointed director of the district WPA office, John Buckley Bryan, an engineer of repute and the respectable front of the organization, is well regarded by everyone as a profssional man but is hopelessly out of place in an organizing job that he had never before attempted. He receives more sympathy than criticism, however, for it is well known that he stands between two fires. He is at the same time under pressure from the Democratic organization above him extending directly through Lester Herzog, WPA State director, to Mr. Hopkins, Jim Farley and the President himself. What undermines him most of all is that he has no power to select his subordinates. This is all done for him by William Cronin, the Democratic county boss, and Francis X. Heyd, at first a zone manager and later engineer in charge of all projects in the county.

As Mr. Bryan's subordinates are not beholden to him for their jobs, there is no discipline in any of the WPA projects, and the county officials have still less influence over these Democratic appointees. Mr. Bryan and especially Mr. Heyd have the power of dismissal, but this seems to be freely exercised only in great emergencies such as I shall later describe.

Government Red Tape Delays Projects.

Mr. Bryan is equally helpless when it comes to the selection of projects. It took WPA from July 1 to December 2, 1935, to begin to function in Westchester because all of the 560 projects submitted had to go from the district office to Albany, from Albany to Mr. Hopkins' office in Washington. In the case of white-collar projects, a co-ordinating committee in Washington must also approve. From Mr. Hopkins, projects go to the President, then to Mr. McCarl, Comptroller General, then back by the same route to the district office in White Plains, to the zone officer, and back to the original Westchester sponsor.

By December 2, when WPA took over relief work, many of the projects originally planned for fall operation were no longer seasonal and were of little use in absorbing labor. In the meantime, on the assumption that the WPA was ready to absorb the employable relief load, many of the TERA projects, then in full operation, were discontinued by that agency. Thus, many of the 3,000 men working on these useful local projects not yet approved by the WPA were transferred to approved WPA projects, many of which were not ready or appropriate for operation at that season. Other projects suitable for winter operation failed to receive WPA approval in time to meet the situation and thus the county in some instances was compelled to acquiesce in the doing of unseasonal work or face the alternative of supporting the workers on direct relief. Additional chaos and uncertainty were created because the project supervisors, politically chosen, were not qualified to carry out their orders and therefore slowed up the opening of new projects.

It is almost impossible to convey adequately the pandemonium and demoralization of this transition period through December and January, nor the human misery that was endured by our relief workers without hope of appeal from WPA officials, who asked but one question: "How do you vote?"

Next it is best to explain how the innumerable WPA subordinates are selected. I have personally interviewed numbers of men who have been through the mill of securing one of the executive jobs usually reserved for Democrats, and reproduce herewith the experience of one man whose name is withheld only to protect his job. The story was taken down as quickly as I could follow the speaker.

Job Hunter Must "Go Through Works."

"I knew the only way to get one of the real jobs was by going through the works. First I went to my district leader, Ed Kearns, of the Fifth Ward of White Plains. After a couple of drinks and cigars I got a letter to Charles Fowler, city Democratic leader. It took weeks to get hold of Fowler because he was hard to reach. I finally waylaid him on the street and he sent me to Cronin with a letter. It helps a lot if you're O. K. with Murphy, the White Plains postmaster, as well. When I saw Cronin, this was the conversation:

"'Mr. Smith, you know our boys have to be taken care of. How are you registered?'

"I said I was registered white.

"Cronin: 'That's against you. What's more the year before the books show you enrolled Republican.'

"He had actually gone into the back records.

"Cronin: 'Well, we'll have to work like hell to overcome that. What was your contribution last year to our local Democratic Club?'"

"At that point," continued Smith, "I lied and told him some sum. But I'd lie again if I had to to get a job to feed my family. There was nothing else to do. He told me to come back later, so I went away and called on all my Democratic friends and told them to be sure to vote Democratic. This was for effect. They investigated me amongst all my neighbors. You have to control a few votes before you can get a real job. When I went back to Cronin and got my job, I didn't wait for the usual request, but beat him to it and said I was broke and would make a Democratic contribution after I got my first salary."

In order to prove at once that I am not talking vague generalities and that I do not exaggerate the political infiltration of WPA, I publish herewith the names, positions, job location and political position of each executive drawing better than a subsistence wage (more than $94 per month) on the WPA pay roll of the Town of Mamaroneck, chosen at random as a typical illustration and supported by the figures of other towns given later.

TOWN OF MAMARONECK.

NOTE—Men reduced to 23, foremen increased to 5.

In this list only three men are genuine relief cases, most of the others being Democratic district leaders or workers who are just being "taken care of." The overloading of each job with foremen is flagrant, as one foreman would have been sufficient or at most two on the larger jobs. It must be remembered that these caddies, plasterers, taxi-drivers, laundry workers, and milkmen were placed in charge of construction sometimes of a complicated nature. The proportion of 23 Democrats to 3 Republicans stands out with even more significance against the background of a town where Republican citizens outnumber Democrats by three to one. Democratic project supervisors receive as a rule $130 per month, Republicans working right beside them and usually appointed because some experienced oversight is necessary, receive $93.50. On April 15, in Mamaroneck, four Republican foremen at $93.50 on one job who were genuine relief cases, were suddenly kicked out to make way for four non-relief Democrats from Yonkers who took their places at $130. In Mamaroneck non-relief salaries are reported to be 16 per cent of the total expenditure. Under TERA, as I have said, the number of such employes was usually less than 2 per cent.

And Then There Are Timekeepers.

In addition, on these and the other 307 projects in Westchester there is an invariably Democratic timekeeper who receives $120 a month if he runs his own car. Some timekeepers may have two small jobs, but on the other hand many projects have two timekeepers besides water boys, first-aid men, etc. Under TERA there were less than 20 field superintendents who also acted as timekeepers and checked the whole county program and that of the 18 towns. The four city work bureaus operated their own programs.

The lad who appeals to me the most for his frank handling of the political situation is a certain WPA supervisor of construction. This playful chap stands on the job with his enrollment books in hand. As the men report for work he demands their names and looks up their party affiliation. If Republican, he says, "Into the ditch"—if Democratic, they are assigned one of the "soft jobs" at higher salary, all quite regardless of qualifications. Mr. Farley, please take notice. Here is a man after your own heart.

Now comes a revealing story, showing how guilty the WPA office in Westchester knows itself to be. The figures I gave for Mamaroneck obtained as of last week Wednesday, May 6. On that day I had my figures copied by a typist in my own Recreation office, a matter of 20 minutes. During that time, this information was filched and carried at once from my floor, the second, to the WPA office on the fourth. Within half an hour I in turn knew what had happened and that the WPA officials were in an uproar. They look upon me as akin to the devil ever since my Town Hall broadcast on Westchester conditions.

The very next day the shake-up in Mamaroneck began. Pursuing the iniquities of the New Deal has a definitely sporting character for they do not seem to have the courage of their evil convictions, but run like mountain trout when the hook strikes their gills. In that one day 14 foremen were fired in Mamaroneck alone, one supervisor was transferred and one field supervisor was demoted. I hope my fellow county citizens who were thus rudely separated from the pay rolls will forgive me and appreciate the fact that they are not my victims but those of a rotten system.

But the fun did not stop here. The next day, Friday the eighth, a number of other towns were to bring me their lists. Rye was rather late. Suddenly my Rye friend appeared breathless. "Mrs. Meyer," he gasped, "I had the whole thing ready for you this morning, but since then they shook up the town and I had to do the whole list over again."

But this story must wait until tomorrow.

FOR LOVE OR MONEY

A New Romantic Serial

By ROB EDEN

THE HEROINE of this latest story by Rob Eden is Brenda Fayre . . . 22 years old, pretty, unhappy. She loves her crippled sister, Lally, and for her must earn enough money to buy food, to pay rent and even to engage the servies of an expensive surgeon. A successful operation might give back to Lally her dancing legs . . . and, also, set her free to marry the man Brenda, herself, loves.

CHAINED to such problems of love and money as these, follow Brenda Fayre as she meets and solves them in one of the most enjoyable and exciting stories ever written for newpaper readers. Don't miss a single chapter.

CHAPTER ONE.

The man belonged but the girl didn't. Very obviously she didn't belong in the Hotel Marguery dining room. The waiter at table 77 realized it, but he was too good a waiter to let it make any difference in his service, so he treated her exactly as he treated her companion. It didn't matter that she was the prettiest girl in the dining room. Beauty wasn't the first consideration at the Marguery. Smartness, fine grooming, well-chosen clothes preceded beauty always. Andre hadn't been a waiter at the Savoy in London, at the old Waldorf Astoria in New York, at the Grillon in Paris for nothing.

Andre didn't look first at the faces of his feminine patrons. He looked at their clothes as he seated them; the furs which they threw on the backs of their chairs or handed to him to check, their gloves, the purses they put on the tables so carelessly, the cigarette cases they drew from their purses, the monogrammed handkerchiefs that came out of them, the bracelets on their wrists, their long, beautiful nails. He knew the scent of good perfumes as well as he knew from the sparkle of a diamond whether it was real or not. He prided himself on his knowledge of women.

Knew Everything.

The girl was barely seated when Andre knew everything about her that was necessary to him. Her black hat was cheap; not only that, it was not new, probably last year's. Her black dress was cheap, but her figure was so good that it did not look as badly as it should have. The shoes on her feet were cheap and old. The purse that she had in her lap, she must have known it would not look well on a Marguery dining table, was cheap, too. Black imitation leather with a green clasp.

She would have been more at home, Andre decided, rushing into a counter sandwich shop for lunch, or a cafeteria. Pretty, yes, with fine reddish brown hair and fine large greenish gray eyes and soft features. She had the sort of face you like to look at if you like faces; the sort of face that an artist would like, a firm, round throat and well set shoulders, even under the cheap dress.

The man belonged. There was a quiet opulence about him that Andre recognized. He had good clothes, inconspicuous, hand-tailored, cut right at the shoulders and cut conservatively. He had, also, the self-assurance that comes with money. Andre was positive the man would be perfectly at home, even in Buckingham Palace. He was that kind of a man—a man who was used to the best of everything. Andre liked that kind. That kind tipped generously, but not too generously. That kind was appreciative and considerate. No scenes when there was a mistake, but an acceptance that sometimes a mistake might occur, even at the Marguery.

The man was older than the girl, but still he was young. Thirty-five Andre put his age, perhaps less. Not a sign of a gray hair in his brown head, laughing wrinkles only in his smoothly shaved face. Not handsome, but clean cut, and in his eyes not the playboy look which Andre knew well enough, but a shrewder look that meant to the waiter that the man was in business.

Confirms Judgment.

"Your 77 guy was in the grill last night with Louis Stokes," one of Andre's fellow waiters told him when he went into the pantry to deliver his order. "His name is Jason."

Andre's eyebrows tilted. The information confirmed his judgment and he was always glad to have that confirmed. Louis Stokes was a multimillionaire who stayed at the Marguery when he was in the city. Everybody who worked at the Marguery knew his name, everybody appreciated his patronage.

Andre murmured his thanks for the name, and said it several times to himself silently. Jason. Jason. He wouldn't forget it, for he made a practice of not forgetting names. If Mr. Jason should come to any table which he presided over 10 years from now, Andre would be able to call him by name, even if he had not seen him in the meantime.

When he approached 77 again, Mr. Jason accepted Andre's mention of his name as a matter of course. There was no surprise evidenced, a fact which convinced the waiter that Mr. Jason was used to being called by name, just as Louis Stokes was accustomed to being recognized every place he went.

Andre, however, was wrong about Jason's casual acceptance of recognition. It was casual on the surface, but underneath there came a quickening in his veins when the waiter called him "Mr. Jason." This didn't show, this inner excitement, but was there all the same. It stayed a few seconds, then passed off, leaving him with the contented, well being feeling that he liked. The same inner excitement came when he entered a luxurious hotel, or a fine apartment house, or when he met someone whom he knew had a good deal of money, or when he bought something that was costly. No one knew about the inner excitement except himself, and that secret stayed with him. For a boy who had no advantages in childhood, who had been born in the slums of Chicago, and who had delivered his mother's washing until he was 11, he had come far. The thought of how far he had come brought the same inner excitement. There wasn't a day that he didn't remember. This, too, was within his secret self. No one knew how far Walter Jason had traveled, except Roger Fayre, and Roger was dead. In a moment of sentimentality, because he had never had a friend like Roger, he had told him the beginnings of his life.

Excitement Gone.

He looked across the table at Roger's sister, and the inner excitement he had been feeling flattened as he saw her hat again and her dress.

He wondered why he had, on the spur of the moment, invited her into the Marguery, when he could have taken her as easily to some less conspicuous place.

Roger's hair, Roger's eyes, even the contour of Roger's face. How much alike they were! Even if he hadn't seen her since she was in high school, he had known her on the street instantly, because she was so much like her brother. Then the shock to know that Roger was dead, and that he had been dead two years.

"We quarreled the last time I saw him," Jason murmured. "Roger—didn't entirely approve of me, you know."

Brenda Fayre nodded, although she didn't know they had quarreled, but she did know what her brother thought of Jason.

"If I remember rightly, he said I would land in jail. He gave me two years. It's six years since then, and I'm not in jail yet, Brenda. He wanted me to stay in the office, but I couldn't see any future in that. Did he stay there until the end?"

Not Fair.

"Yes—" she answered a little impatiently, because she didn't want to talk about Roger. The presence of Jason was bringing him back so strongly that she was savage for a moment with the thought that Walter should be sitting before her, carefree, and Roger was not.

"Of course he had you and Lally to think about. And I had nobody. you didn't tell me how Lally was——"

"She's—the same——"

"No."

"A pity——"

Something tightened in Brenda's heart, a familiar contraction. It came when anyone pitied Lally, for Lally didn't like to be pitied. People were always expressing pity for Lally, and when they did and Lally heard them, a gray film came over her soft blue eyes, and little fine lines formed at her mouth.

"Roger always was wishing he could afford an operation for her," Walter went on.

Brenda said nothing. The explanations would be too long, and she would have to mention Roger's name again and again if she started. It wouldn't make any difference to Walter Jason that Lally had had her operation, possible because of Roger's death insurance, and that it was a failure.

"Let's see; you should be 20——"

"I'm 22 now, and Lally is 19," Brenda said aloud, and then to herself, "and Roger would be 30. If he were here I wouldn't be walking the streets looking for a job, and I wouldn't be lunching with you just because you told me when you ran into me on the street in front of the hotel that you might know of something for me."

A Job.

There was a silence while Walter finished his luncheon. Brenda couldn't eat hers. Finally she pushed the plate aside so she wouldn't even see it. The next moment it disappeared, for Andre had taken it away. She wondered as she surreptitiously watched Walter whether he had really said what she thought he had, that he might know of a job for her; or whether she had dreamed it, because she so desperately needed a job. Since they had come into the dining room he had not mentioned the subject and that was what she was waiting to hear.

"Twenty-two," he said, half to himself, and then he looked at her and smiled. She smiled, shyly back at him, and choked back the question she was going to ask, the question about the job. Perhaps it would be better to let Walter mention it.

He did as soon as Andre cleared his place and poured the coffee.

"So you're looking for a job?"

"Looking—yes. I've been looking for two weeks."

"I've been looking for a girl, too, Brenda, and I haven't found exactly the girl I want, although I've considered a good many."

"Secretarial work? I'm a good stenographer."

"Not exactly. No, you couldn't call it stenographic work." Walter studied her narrowly while he lit a cigarette. "No, it's more salesmanship."

"I've never sold anything."

"You don't need anything for this job that I have in mind but poise and beauty. You have both, Brenda. You're very pretty and, with good clothes, I think you'll be what I want."

"What do looks and clothes have to do with this job of yours?"

"A good deal. I find a pretty girl an asset in business. I've employed girls before with less looks than you have and they've made money for themselves. That is, some of them have, and some of them haven't because they became too smart to obey orders. But when they follow instructions, they do all right. You have what I want, looks, refinement, poise. We can teach you salesmanship."

"And what would I have to sell?"

Walter seemed preoccupied with his cigarette for awhile, but Brenda waited patiently. When he spoke, it was in a low tone, and he was frowning slightly.

"At the present time, I am selling shares in the Gold Oak mine. It's a gold mine in New Mexico. I own it with a partner and while we aren't putting the shares on the general market, we are selling a block here and a block there to get enough money for proper development and expansion. It's the usual way to develop a mine when you don't want syndicate capital and when you want to keep a good share of the profits yourself. I do what selling there is myself and I have my own method in selling. That's why I use a pretty, intelligent girl, in a purely business way."

"I still don't understand." Brenda said, when he paused.

"I work this way, Brenda. I work on the theory that my prospects don't want to talk hard and fast business all the time. They want to be amused, even if they think they don't. I break up my intense selling campaigns with amusement."

He put one elbow on the table, and leaned forward.

"For instance, I have a prospect who looks good. He comes to my office by appointment, for a business talk to look over my maps and assay reports. I have a slight interruption, a girl comes in to lunch with me, a date I have forgotten. Instead of two of us going to lunch together, three of us go and we forget business for awhile.

"Or I have a business luncheon with a prospect. A girl whom I know is sitting at a table nearby. What would be more natural than that she join us, and we talk of other things than business? Some of the prospects may want to continue acquaintance with my operative, and sometimes that acquaintance is encouraged, but the girls I hire are not cheap. I can get all of that kind I want, but I don't want them.

"If you take the job with me, my status to you will be that of an old friend of your brother's, nothing more. A charming girl whom I meet casually now and then. You will be supplied with some information about the mine, but not much, for the kind of salesmanship I want from you will be indirect, a guileless pretense that you know nothing of business. I've found that succeeds very well. There must be no effort on your part to be more than a charming companion, no outward selling of anything. To some of my prospects, you will even be ignorant of what I am doing. It's a job for an actress really, and that's what you'll have to be, a natural actress. You'll be properly dressed for your part. You'll have clothes which you can wear in the evenings. These I will furnish, and pick out, because I know what I want. Is that clear so far?"

"Yes, it's clear——"

"You will be on call at all times, but I shan't use you every day. I shall probably use you only a couple of times a week, but I want you always where I can find you.

"We shall be here for around six months, I think, and then we shall move on to Detroit. In a business such as mine there is more or less constant moving to make new contacts and to sell more stock. If you decide to come with me, your salary will be $50 a week to start and you will get 1 per cent on all the sales you help me with. The commission, of course, will amount to much more than the salary. In return, I'll ask you to stay with me for the whole period we are here. When we move on to Detroit you can go with us, or leave us, as you wish. There it all is as briefly as I can put it. Do you think you want the job?"

Brenda's voice was not steady as she answered. "I know I want it."

"I'll give you time to think it over. Suppose you give me an answer tomorrow some time."

"But I said I wanted the job——"

"You don't want time to think it over?"

"No." Why should she think it over when she needed a job, when she had to have one? When for two weeks she had been walking the streets looking for a job, going from one agency to another, waiting and waiting and trying to will a job out of the air? When she had answered advertisement after advertisement all for nothing. When she had heard the same story over and over again until she was so tired of it she could scream, "Nothing today, Miss Fayre. No, we don't know when something will come up."

When every morning the alarm clock rang at the same time, 7, so she could get Lally bathed and up in her wheel chair before she started for "the office."

When she took the same street car home every day, the one that landed at the corner of Twelfth and Fowler at 6 o'clock, so she could be home at her regular time, and Lally could wave to her from the fifth floor balcony.

When for two weeks she had been telling Lally about the office in the old way, what everybody was doing, what she had done, whom she had seen. The old way, the way she had done for two years.

Pretending.

Sometimes she thought she should have told Lally right away, but it had seemed so easy not to. I'll go on the same old way—I've got two weeks pay in advance, and in two weeks I can find another job, Lally will never have to know. She'd worry too much.

So it had gone on, she pretending she was still with the Northcraft Paper & Twine Co. in the office with Mr. Wright, when the Northcraft Co. had consolidated with the Beckman Co. and all the Northcraft people were out—even Mr. Wright. All were looking for jobs as she was. She pretending to Lally that she was still earning $110 a month, when she had had to let the rent slide to keep up the pretense.

If she had only herself to think about—but there was Lally, and Lally's comfort to consider. Lally's happiness, and Lally was happier at the Corwin Apartments than she had ever been—even when Roger was with them. Keeping house, budgeting expenses, fussing with the garden she had made on the balcony, proud that she could help, doing much more than her frailness would allow.

Even on $110 a month you had to manage very closely; very, very closely. You never had anything left at the end of the month—often bills at the drug store and the grocery store. But when there was no money coming in at all, then you got into a panic. Brenda had been in a panic for a week. The first week job hunting wasn't so bad. She was hopeful. She kept telling herself that something would come up. She still had confidence. The second week the confidence wore off a little, until this morning it was gone completely, and when she met Jason accidentally at noon she was almost in despair.

"No, I don't want to think it over," she repeated. Fifty dollars a week, that was a fortune. It would buy for them things they had hardly dreamed of. A new chair for Lally, comforts she needed, massage treatments Dr. Pierce wanted her to have, the luxury of a telephone which Lally longed for, an outing in a car now and then. Fifty dollars a week! The commissions she could set aside as savings.

Fifty dollars a week was twice what she had ever earned before.

"I don't want my sister to know exactly what I'm doing," she said, a worried little frown touching the bridge of her nose.

"That can be arranged. We've done things like that before. Miss Rush, who is my partner, will talk over plans with you about where you are to get your calls. She'll be with us, also, when you get your wardrobe tomorrow."

They parted in the lobby, Brenda with his card in her hand, "Walter Jason Enterprises, 900 Tower Bldg." Her shoulders were erect as she walked away from him, her head high, and her lips pressed together in a tight smile. Over and over she told herself that it didn't matter now what kind of a job she got so long as it took care of Lally.

If Walter's job would take care of Lally she had a right to take it. A moral right. Lally came first, her comfort and her well being.

Even Roger would say that if he were here. That was what he always said when he was with them. That was what he said after the brakes had locked on his car the night he died, in that brief moment when Brenda was standing before his hospital bed, before life had gone from him. A few words forcing themselves through his lips, words which the nurse beside her could not understand, but which Brenda did. "There's only you now to care for Lally——"

Whether the Gold Oak mine contained precious metal or not, she had thrown her life with Walter's—for six months. As she touched the rounded glass revolving door that led to the street Brenda was quite sure that the Gold Oak mine contained no gold, or other metals which were salable, and her head went up a little higher as the hot breeze of the June afternoon struck her face.

A Siren.

Walter Jason turned only when the slim black figure disappeared. Then he went to the phone booths at the right of the desk and called his office number. While he was waiting for his connection, he lighted another cigarette, and soon the booth was blue with smoke.

"Ethel?" He said as soon as he heard Miss Rush's voice.

"I hired a siren today, just now, in fact." He chuckled and a smile broke out on his face. He and Ethel always called their girl operatives "sirens." It was Ethel who had named them. In the five years of their partnership, they had had half a dozen, in the various cities in which they had set up offices. Walter invariably did the hiring because he knew what he wanted.

From the Marguery he went to the Wilton Athletic Club where he played four games of badminton. While he was there, he met two excellent prospects for Gold Oak stock, for the Wilson was a rich man's club. Walter never indulged in sports of any other kind. In an hour, he had cultivated one of the prospects sufficiently to be invited the following day to make up a golf foursome and the other for an early morning horseback ride, preceding the golf game. The Gold Oak mine was not mentioned and would not be until the acquaintanceships had advanced into friendships.

CHAPTER TWO.

The wheel chair was only one inch narrower than the kitchen door, but Lally managed it expertly. A thrust with her hands on the wheels, a jerk and she and the chair, which was part of her, were in. It took maneuvering, too, in the kitchen to turn the chair, for the room was small and the chair filled it almost completely, but Lally knew the kitchen like a book, knew just what she could do with the chair and what she couldn't, how to turn the wheels so she could get at the sink faucets, at the stove, into the icebox and the cupboards.

On the paint were some old scratches, but no new ones, for she seldom bumped into anything any more. At first, a year and a half ago, when they had taken the flat, she had made the scratches. She couldn't, of course, get into the lower drawers or the upper cupboards, but that didn't matter because there was nothing in them. Everything was within reach. A dozen times a day she was in and out of the kitchen.

It was the second time in 20 minutes that she had been in the kitchen. The excuse this time was to take the cover off the pot roast and see how it was doing, to stir it a little, and then look at the potatoes and carrots soaking in cold water on the sink, to peer into the icebox and see the biscuits that were waiting to be popped into the oven as soon as Brenda got home.

Responsibility.

For Lally felt an immense responsibility in her cooking. Brenda got the breakfast, Lally her own lunch because she was alone, and then the dinner for herself and Brenda at night. Not hurry-up dinners, either. Carefully planned dinners, for she was a good cook. Economical dinners because she kept a budget. Brenda made the living and she kept house.

It was surprising, too, what Lally and her chair could manage. From the chair she could mop the bathroom and the kitchen floor—it took a good deal of time, but she did it. She could operate the carpet sweeper and she could dust.

Not the legs of the chairs, but the seats and the backs, the tops of the tables, anything if the object was not too high or too low. The sink she kept shining, and the lower panes of the windows. She could wash out Brenda's underthings and her own, string a line in the kitchen, turn on the oven and the clothes dried quickly and efficiently. She could iron, too, for she took the ironing board into the living room and put it on the table which served as a dining table.

Her days were busy, full ones. After Brenda was gone she did the work about the little flat, and after it was done she went out on the balcony to work in her garden. In the afternoon, there was dinner to get ready, mending to finish, Peter to take care of. Peter helped her a good deal, sitting beside her where she could talk to him and he could answer her. She always told him what she was doing and why she was doing it, and he would cock his smart little head and nod at her. Peter was not a young bird. He had been Lally's for four years, and in the pet store where Roger Fayre had bought him, Roger had been told he could sing. He had heard him sing. He always swore he did. A magnificent singer, he told Lally and Brenda when he brought Peter home. Probably would he strange at first, but after a few days he'd start singing.

The few days passed and then a week, and now four years, but Peter never sang a note. He chirped, yes, Lally even claimed he spoke, but he never sang; and Lally was never disappointed that he didn't. She never thought about his singing after she had him. He was Peter and she loved him and he loved her.

"Are you all right, Peter?" she called anxiously after she put the potatoes and carrots in with her pot roast.

"Peter! Answer me!"

There was a short half impatient sound from him, but she wasn't satisfied, so she wheeled the chair quickly out of the kitchen, through the living room and to the balcony. Peter was fussing with the hinge on his cage door, and let out a chatter of protest when the girl reached over and bent the fine hairpin that held the hinge together.

There were three reasons why Brenda had taken 519 at the Corwin. One was that the building had an elevator, another was that there was an auto ramp from the basement to the street up which Lally's chair could be pushed easily, and the third was the balcony, so that Lally could sit out in the sun. Many of the flats that faced Fowler street had balconies, but none of the balconies were like Lally's. True, on several a few flower pots stood on the brick railings, the soil in them parched by the wind and the sun and the geraniums starved and root bound, and behind some of the flower pots were reed rockers which were not used very often, except on hot nights.

The balcony of 519 was really not a balcony at all. It was a garden. Six feet long and 4 feet wide, there was room only for Lally's wheel chair, and the tiny table that held Peter's cage, yet all through the spring and summer it had yielded flowers for the flat. Even in the winter Lally had managed to coax blooms from two of her roses, and while the snow was still on the ground, three pinkish white crocuses pushed their heads through one of the boxes. One would have satisfied Lally—but three! She covered the little pinkish heads with jelly glasses, and they lasted for nearly a week. Her daffodils, two of them, she saved through the bad frost with quart milk bottles, and her tulip she kept alive the same way.

A Garden.

On the side railings were boxes, and above the boxes trellises for the nasturtiums, morning glories and honeysuckle which twined together. On the front railing were only a few pots of zinnias coming up green and strong because it was from here that Lally looked down onto the street. On the floor in the corners were other small pots containing her rose bushes. These, if she wanted to work at them, Brenda would lift up to the railing before she went out to work.

The soil in the boxes was rich and fertile, well worked, for Lally had a magic with flowers. The blooms were fine large ones, the colors gay, the nasturtiums blending from pale yellow to brilliant reds and oranges. The leaves were cool and healthy. On hot days, she would protect her tenderest buds with bits of tissue paper, and lay damp cloths around the boxes so the soil would not parch. There were some tissue wrappers over the zinnia buds now, because the day had been very warm. She moved her chair out and took them off.

"They should be out tomorrow, Peter," she said softly, and Peter uttered two little chirps which told that he agreed with her.

"Brenda should be coming in a little while——" She peered up the street, knowing it was too early to expect her sister, but hoping all the same, as she hoped every day, that Brenda would surprise her and come home early. The last half hour before Brenda came was the loneliest in the day for Lally. It was the time when everything was done, when she was waiting, when she couldn't relax because half her mind was on the dinner and half of it impatient for Brenda.

Down the street were other apartment houses and flat buildings, all of them old, and many of them shabby because Fowler street off Twelfth avenue was no longer a good neighborhood. Some of the buildings were a few stories higher than the Corwin, some of them only two or three floors. Two blocks up was Twelfth avenue, where Brenda would get off the bus. Lally could see the busy corner, and on quiet nights and days she could hear the traffic bells that rang at regular intervals of two minutes from 6 in the morning until 10 at night.

Then she shook her head and her heavy hair fell about her shoulders. She was tired, and when she was tired she couldn't stand the knot at the back of her neck, nor the hairpins digging into her flesh. She felt better as soon as her hair was down. It was a little cooler than it had been. A soft breeze was starting up.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

Conclusion

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

THERE ARE so many things to make clear, when two who love each other, very much, have played at cross purposes for many days.

Jim, holding Ruth close in his arms, had many questions to answer. "When did you first know that I wasn't June, dear?"

"I think almost from the very first, little darling," Jim said. "You know the day I told you about Lou? You acted as though you had never even heard her name before."

"Oh, I didn't act that way. I surely didn't." Ruth expostulated gaily, "why, I thought I played right up to you in great fashion. I thought I left you thinking I remembered all about Lou."

"Well, you didn't, darling. There were other times, too. At first I was too ill, too worried about what was happening to know anything but that it was very dear and very pleasant to have you close to me."

"And when did you suspect that something was wrong?"

"I suspected that almost from the first, too; I was sure of it the first day that Pascoe came and my physician and nurses were dismissed. But I lived in a sort of hazy dream, so weak from my injury and so nearly unconscious from the poison they were giving me that I couldn't think clearly. Then, too, at one of the times when I got a little stronger I heard Pascoe and the new doctor talking about you."

"About me?"

"Yes. They thought I was too weak or too nearly gone to understand."

"What did they say?"

"Pascoe had fallen in love with you. It had been agreed that when they finished with me, keeping you still in ignorance of what was happening, that Pascoe's share in the transaction was to be you."

Here, safe in her lover's arms, surrounded by friends, it almost seemed to Ruth as if she had been dreaming the whole evil story. The plot of it rehearsed in safety sounded fantastic and absurd. "Yes, I knew that Pascoe wanted—me?"

Jim was holding her very, very close. "We owe Pascoe something, criminal that he is, he probably saved your life."

"From the Bradleys?"

"Yes, when they knew their plot was failing and you were wise to the fact that you were an actual prisoner in their hands, they wanted to be rid of you. And they were desperate enough by then to do it some way.

"And Pascoe saved you. We can be grateful to him for that."

"Looking back at it now," Ruth said, "it seems to me that I must have dreamed it all. Everything is so wonderful now, so happy, so safe, so secure."

"And the world is filled with love," Jim said, kissing her rapturously. "Ruth, darling, do you know that you're the prettiest girl the very prettiest girl I've ever seen in all my life?"

"And that's another miracle—that you can see, that you can really see. Tell me, Jim dear, when you first began to see me—was that the day you told me about Lou?"

"Not then, sweet. My eyes were bandaged then. I think the first time I was sure my sight was coming back was right after the heaviest bandages were taken away and my eyes were left uncovered."

"And you didn't tell the doctor?"

"No. He was the new one—whom Pascoe and my uncle had brought. If he knew about my eyes, he never said so. He was always so nervous in the room. I said nothing about my eyesight because I realized the terrible danger we were in. I thought if they still believed me to be blind that I might somehow have an advantage. Of course here at the hospital the doctors and the nurses knew. I asked them to say nothing about it, for a time."

"And you knew all the time that the wedding was only make believe?"

"I didn't suspect at first. And it kept you very close to me. Ruth, you'll wear your little blue gown again—for me at a real wedding? Why, sweet, you're crying."

"Just because I'm happy, Jim," Ruth sobbed, "just because I'm so happy I've—I've just got to cry."

"My darling," Jim said softly, "my wife."

"We'll wait for the wedding until Jerry and June come," Ruth said.

And so there was much happiness and merriment even between the gray, quiet walls of that hospital room.

One by one the ones who cared a great deal about Jim and Ruth and their happiness came. Jerry, a modest hero, but very outspoken in his relief at sight of his sister—safe and sound.

Capricious, gay June who hugged Jim and then hugged Ruth and smiled at Jerry until that good-looking young man found his heart pounding more quickly than he had ever dreamed possible.

"June likes Jerry," Jim found time to whisper in Ruth's ear and she whispered back elaborately. "And from the looks of things it is quite mutual."

Abigail came to the wedding, too. Looking very uncomfortable in a handsome, black satin dress. June kissed her and she smiled at Ruth quite indulgently. And Ruth was glad. She liked Abigail. She was glad that Abigail liked her, and had forgiven her the deception.

And the Reagans came. At Ruth's request they brought Bette along. "I'll need you, Bette—always," Ruth told her friend, and Bette wiped the tears of happiness from her kind eyes.

The minister read the sacred old service.

"Do you, James, take Ruth to be your legal, lawfully wedded wife—to have and to hold, to love and to cherish, until death parts you?"

* * * *

"Yes, sir," old Abigail often said afterward. "It was the loveliest wedding I ever saw. Mister Jim was so big and handsome and Miss Ruth so pretty and sweet. And wasn't it just the romantickest love affair you ever did hear tell of?"

The End.

Mrs. Sturges Is Passenger On Zeppelin

By Dudley Harmon.

When the giant dirigible Hindenburg nosed her way out of the Lakehurst hangar for the return trip to Germany, among the 50-odd adventurous passengers on board was Mrs. Hollister Sturges, a sister of Mrs. H. B. Hutchison, of Washington, who visited the Capital several weeks ago.

Through her late husband Mrs. Sturges is a sister-in-law of the Countess of Sandwich, whom she will visit in England. Mrs. Sturges also is related to the English debutante, Miss Janet Margesson, daughter of Mrs. David Margesson, the former Mrs. Frances Leggett. This is her first visit to Germany, and she will spend a week in Berlin before going by airplane to England.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, with their daughter, Mlle. Marie Therese de Laboulaye, were among the passengers in the liner Normandie when she sailed from New York at midnight bound for le Havre. Contrary to the rumor that they were leaving America permanently, the Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye will return early next fall to the embassy on Kalorama Circle.

Others from Washington who sailed aboard the Normandie were Princess Margaret Boncompagni and Mr. Alphons B. Landa, who is going to Paris for a short holiday before returning to this country in June. Mrs. Landa, who was in New York to see him off, will return to the Capital tomorrow. The passengers will be feted tonight at a special dinner celebrating the Normandie's first trip eastward this season, at which 500 bottles of rare vintage wines, collected especially for the occasion, will be served.

One of the passengers in the Normandie's new rival, the Queen Mary, when she makes her second return trip to England in July will be the chairman of the Tariff Commission, Mr. Robert Lincoln O'Brien. He will go first to the celebrated German watering place, Bad Gastein, and will then spend three weeks in Stratford, England. From there he expects to go to Budapest for his first visit to the Hungarian capital. Mrs. O'Brien will spend the time her husband is away in the mountains of New Hampshire.

Miss Helen Davis, daughter of Mr. Dwight Davis, who married Mrs. Charles Sabin a short time ago, sails Saturday on the Georgic for Ireland, where she will spend three weeks touring the countryside by bicycle. She also is contemplating a trip to Soviet Russia. Her sister, Miss Cynthia Davis, will follow her to Europe in a few weeks.

Bound for a holiday in England are the First Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. Phillip Broadmead, and the Second Secretary, Mr. Phillip Broad, who will sail May 28 in the Berengaria for a stay of several weeks.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Even Mr. Norman Davis, the American Ambassador at large, has not seen more countries in the last six months than Miss Christine Owen, just home from a "trek" through 14 countries in Europe, Asia and Africa in company with Mrs. Joseph J. Kerrigan, well known in Washington as Miss Esther Slater and as the former Mrs. Sumner Welles.

Miss Owen is a traveler who has crossed and recrossed the Atlantic many times and is as familiar with the South and Central American countries as with those of Europe. With Mrs. Kerrigan, she went into the war-threatened zones and into out-of-the-way places, where sometimes they were the only tourists. They went to the Holy Land and 1,000 miles south of Cairo into deep Africa. In Greece they saw all the ancient ruins.

Miss Owen, an intrepid horsewoman, during this trip rode everything, from mules, donkeys, elephants and camels to high spirited horses.

Miss Owen is an accomplished linguist and, as they entered a new country, she drew on her store of languages with which to make herself understood.

Mrs. John N. Garner, wife of the Vice President, enjoys slipping away from the social cares of high office and the Vice Presidential office, where she is chief secretary, on little journeys, to nearby Virginia and Maryland. To get out into the country is real recreation to this Second Lady of the Land, who hails from the wide-open spaces of Texas. Yesterday she drove her car herself, taking a group of Senate ladies on a picnic party to Stratford, the home of Robert E. Lee. En route they stopped for a picnic luncheon and made Stratford in such time that would have amazed Light Horse Harry Lee, Revolutionary general and former resident there, who was regarded as somewhat of a speed demon in his day. Mrs. Garner has made the Stratford project one of her chief interests outside of politics.

Early in June, former Postmaster General and Mrs. Harry New will go to their summer home at Turtle Lake, Mich., where they have as elaborate a bird sanctuary as at Hemlock Lodge, their home in Bethesda, Md.

The bird village in the New home in Bethesda is historic, and those who drive out for tea in the pleasant gardens are certain to see some unusual variety of bird which has come to join the bird colony at Hemlock Lodge.

Mrs. William N. Doak, widow of the former Secretary of Labor in the Hoover Cabinet, is another bird-lover and authority. She lists every species she sees on her estate, Notre Nid.

Miss Stone's Art Will Be Exhibited At Studio House

Miss Eleanor Stone, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Ellis Stone, will be one of the students exhibiting in the third annual showing at Studio House, opening today, to continue to May 28.

Other students, whose pictures will be hung in the exhibition, include Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts; Miss Mary Bradley, Mrs. Wilson Brown, wife of the Naval Aid to the President; Miss Elizabeth Brown and Mrs. W. I. Myers, wife of the governor of the Farm Credit Board.

Vincent Benets Back From Paris To Live in Capital

After a residence of 36 years in Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Vincent Benet have returned to Washington to live. At present they are staying at the Mayflower, but plan to take an apartment.

Mrs. Benet, the former Miss Margaret Cox, was born in Washington and lived here until her marriage. Mr. Benet is the son of the late Gen. Benet, who was for several years chief of ordnance in the Capital.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

I CAN'T SAY that bath perfumes or fragrant bath salts do anything especially for you physcially, but I certainly can guarantee an uplift to anybody's spirit who takes a bath perfumed with some favorite essence.

One of the best bath perfumes known is lavender. It is supposed to be, and to me it certainly is, restful to the spirit. If you get up feeling off color in the morning, a lavender-scented bath will yank you into place in no time at all.

The very easiest levender bath and, I must say, one of the very finest, is arranged by a couple of shakes of a small green bottle filled with liquid lavender bath salts. The bottle is a decoration for any bathroom—a beautiful emerald green—perfectly round, just big enough to close your hand around and with a long neck projecting from it on which you merely turn a tiny gold crown top, and the bottle is opened. It will take only a few drops to perfume a whole tubful of water.

The bottle fits into the bathroom fixture designed to hold a glass and does it look pretty?

Motor Host Has 'Duties' To Perform

Should Be Polite to His Guests; Rudeness Is Inexcusable.

By Margaret Wallace.

MOTOR MANNERS are most important at this time of year. The first duty of a motor host is to pay consideration to the comfort of the guests in his car, which for the time being is his castle. It is the duty of the guests to be polite and unselfish.

It is a form of rudeness to drive too fast and to break the traffic rules. No one enjoys riding in a car if the driver is liable to arrest.

Guests should be seated as far as possible according to their preference. Don't put a guest on the sunny side of the car for a long day's ride if it can be avoided. Some persons object to drafts, so be sure that this is controlled as far as possible. Other guests like plenty of fresh air. If more than one guest is to be considered, there will, of course, be as many different preferences as to seats and to other comforts in the car. Consider the oldest and more distinguished guests first.

If there is a chauffeur, the host or hostess reserves the seat nearest to the speaking tube, so that instructions may be given to the driver. Usually the host rides in front with the chauffeur if all the other seats are taken. If a guest wishes to ride in front it is polite to let him do so.

The well-behaved guest allows the host or hostess to make arrangements for seating in the car without unduly voicing his personal preferences. He does not object to the route chosen by the host and does not ask to stop to shop or to call on a friend, or to consult a business acquaintance.

Invitations for a long trip of a day or days are usually given by a note, or personally. The wise host or hostess explains to the guests when they are invited where they intend to drive, how long they are to stay and other details. Unless an agreement is made in the beginning, the host pays the expense of the trip. It is quite good form to enter into an agreement whereby the guests pay their share of everything, including gasoline, hotel bills and lunches. The host may invite the guests for the ride to and from the home of a friend or another city and not assume the expense of the trip in any way, but furnishing transportation.

Query—My daughters have been invited to the home of a friend in the Middle West. Another young girl guest and her mother have invited my daughters to be their guests on a motor trip to the home they will all visit. The mother wrote to me asking my daughters to be her guests on the trip and explained that they would stop at hotels on the way where she would expect my daughters to be her guests. Will it be proper to accept this invitation without paying my daughters' expenses on the road and at the hotels.

Answer—It will be quite proper to accept the invitation. Your daughters will be the guests of this woman in her car and for the trip on exactly the same terms as they would be if they were guests in her home. They can invite the mother and daughter to dinner or luncheon or tea or to the theater or motion pictures in some of the towns they pass through or buy simple gifts along the way. They should not offer to pay for gasoline or any of the other expenses of driving the car in which they are guests. They should not offer to pay for their hotel rooms but they can tip the maids. They also should give a very generous tip to the chauffeur.

Query—I was invited on a trip to Annapolis by motor with a friend and her husband. My friend took the front seat by her husband, who was driving, while I sat in the rear seat alone. Was this polite?

Answer—No, it was very rude. The wife should ask a woman guest to ride with her husband in the front seat if he is driving.

A Bright Coat Adds a Dash of Color

For the office, spectator sports and for the vacation wardrobe, there could be nothing smarter or more practical than the frock and its accompanying jacket pictured above. It is simple in design and still possesses a maximum of style—an ensemble suitable for almost any informal wear. Maize silk crepe fashions the frock and the large brown buttons furnish an effective contrast; pleats in the front of the skirt are not only decorative but give wanted fulness.

The small collar is also interesting—an adaptation of the John Barrymore collar style which originated in Hollywood this season. The short-sleeve box coat of the same material is cleverly embroidered in green and brown wool, following the trend for three colors rather than two as a summer color scheme. For the name of the store where this outfit may be purchased, call The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, Extension 323.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

19-Year-Old Girl Voices Bitter Protest Against Advice Given Here; Her Reaction Is Understandable.

MARY HAWORTH: How could you print such a letter as that from "Worried Aunt," which appeared in your column last Friday, May 8? Did you not realize that in giving the reply you did you would be making life unbearably hard for other girls, especially those dependent upon their parents? I am a girl of 19, very well thought of by everyone. That is no exaggeration, either. I graduated from high school two years ago and since that time have remained at home helping my mother at her place of work, where we make our home.

• • • •

The very day that letter and answer was published I went out about 7 o'clock in the evening and came home before 11:30 o'clock. As a result of my coming in at that dreadful(?) hour I was given a very severe scolding and told to read your answer to "Worried Aunt." Humph! Mary Haworth, do you know how often I go out? Once a week. All my other time from early morning until bedtime is spent with my mother. I am not angry with my mother, however, but if I had a shotgun I would come down to The Post and blow you to Jericho, I'm just that burned up by the unreasonableness of it all.

• • • •

I dare you to print this, you doddering old namby-pamby. I wish all young girls between the ages of 18 and 22 would get together and ride you out of Washington on a rail. NINETEEN.

Cases Are Dissimilar.

DEAR NINETEEN: If you have given an unprejudiced account of affairs in your home life, I believe your mother is erring on the side of exaggerated precaution and unduly severe discipline in permitting you to spend only one evening a week with your friends. And if you are a hardworking, responsible minded, entirely trustworthy young women, I see no reason why she should have scolded you so severely for coming in at 11:30 o'clock in the evening. It seems to me that is a reasonably early retiring hour for a girl of your age.

• • • •

Suggestions given for dealing with a reckless, untrustworthy, headstrong girl of 18 (such as "Worried Aunt" described her niece as being); one who says "I am 18 and I will do as I please," who says "I will be home when I get home" and comes in at any hour before dawn after her mother has already conceded her the too-generous privilege of coming in at 2:30 in the morning, were never meant to be applied to any situation other than one embodying such dangerous extremes of conduct.

• • • •

In my opinion, there is no reason why you shouldn't spend two or three evenings a week in company of friends your own age, at respectable places of amusement, providing you make a point of getting home at or before midnight. If you are hardworking, you need an average of 8 hours' sleep a night; but if you are trustworthy, self-respecting and intelligent — and what you say here leads one to believe you are all of these things—then you are entitled to some leeway in formulating and following a moderate program of social diversions.

• • • •

It is very pleasant to hear that you are not angry with your mother, and your embittered rebellion against social frustration is so entirely understandable that it is very easy to forgive your vicious thrusts at me. The young person who is denied a sufficiency of social outlets, who suffers from lack of understanding and trust on his parents' part, who is treated as a puppet instead of an intelligent and trustworthy individual capable of making some decisions for himself, must in the very nature of things blow off steam some way, somehow. But I assure you that I am not the heavy-handed dogmatic antagonist you assume me to be.

• • • •

I wish I could help you solve your problem, so that your life might move along more normally and happily; so that your mother would send you forth on occasional evenings with her cheerful blessing, to enjoy yourself in wholesome ways with congenial companions. But until your mother gives me her point of view, I cannot hope to deal with any degree of effectiveness with whatever mental attitude of hers gives rise to the stern disciplinary measures she has adopted in your regard. M. H.

City Club Gives Dinner Tonight.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Malaria.

History surrounds malaria with tragedy. Dominating all other factors, it was this disease that paved the way for the decadence of Roman civilization. So general was the infection along the shores of the Mediterranean that the virility and stamina of a great people were sapped to the point where they could no longer resist decay from within nor assaults from without. It was malaria and yellow fever that defeated the French in their attempt to construct a canal connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific, and it was only after mosquito control was inaugurated under the leadership of the late Gen. Gorgas that the Panama Canal became an accomplished fact.

Years and years ago malaria was linked with the prevalence of night air, and was thought to occur because of some vapor or miasm that arose from swamps, and that was breathed in by the victim. It was a French surgeon, Laveran, stationed in Algiers, who in 1880 first noted tiny, dark dots in the blood cells of patients ill with chills and fever. In them he recognized for the first time the parasites responsible for the infection.

Today every American schoolboy knows that malaria is spread through the agency of the mosquito. All mosquitos can not transfer malaria and not every spreader can infect a human being, even though she bites. Infection of a well person can take place only through the bite of an insect that has previously sucked blood from a patient ill with the disease. The anopheles is the guilty group. There are 44 different members of this family that have been convicted of carrying malaria, and, as is the case with the black widow spider, it is only the female that need be feared. We know that the anopheles is a night biter, and hence persons who are out after dark in a mosquito infested district are more likely to be bitten.

Several Types of Disease.

There are several types of the disease, the most common of which is called the tertian. In this form the chill is preceded by nausea, aching in the back and general discomfort. Chilly sensations gradually appear in the feet, spread upward along the thighs and spine, until a fully developed "shake" appears. The individual can not control the violent tremors of the body or the chattering of the teeth. Although the surface of the body is cool and the patent complains of feeling cold, the internal temperature is high, often reaching 105 to 106 degrees F. Accompanying the fever the victim usally notes the presence of a throbbing headache. Sweating comes in after the hot stage has lasted from four to six hours, and the fever then diminishes.

In pernicious malaria the symptoms are much more severe. The onset may be very sudden, with restlessness, delirium and unconsciousness within a few hours. Respiration is interfered with, and sometimes paralysis occurs. The pulse becomes irregular and weak. When sweating appears improvement follows for a time, but additional symptoms of paralysis may ensue if treatment is inadequate, and the patient may pass into a state of general collapse.

Quinine Oldest Remedy.

For centuries quinine has been known as the remedy of choice. It can be given by mouth or injected into a vein under the skin, or into the muscles. In severe cases the best procedure is to administer the solution directly into a vein. There are, however, many new preparations that have been employed successfully. Plasmochin and atabrin are both widely used, and in some instances appear to be even more efficient than the old standby. It is doubtful if quinine will ever be wholly replaced.

Regardless of the part of the country in which we live, the anopheles mosquito may be found. It is known to be a regular inhabitant of the wet lowlands in the vicinity of New York City and of some localities about the Great Lakes region. A rather sizable epidemic could be started if enough infected persons would tarry long in the vicinty of swarms of the anopheles. Our South Atlantic and Gulf States are keenly alert to the menace of the disease.

The event, from 3 to 5 o'clock, will include a band concert and bicycle races.

The audience will have an opportunity to judge between the effectiveness of shorts and the new culottes as bicycling and sports garb generally. Models also will display bathing suits, tennis costumes and clothes for golf, mountains and horseback riding.

Women's Group Links 5 Continents

Associated Country Women of World Provide Many Contacts.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ON THE SUBJECT of the Associated Country Women of the World, Elsie M. Zimmern can talk interminably. About herself, she is not so articulate. In fact, if you don't know before you meet this small, silver-haired woman that she has a number of claims to international attention, you will probably come away from the interview knowing all about the organization of which she is corresponding secretary, all about its Third Triennial Conference, to be held here June 1-6, and little about the alert, enthusiastic person who recently came over from London to make final arrangements for the conference.

But persistent questioning will reveal a number of facts about her, for example, that she is a sister of Sir Alfred Zimmern, who was formerly connected with the League of Nations and is now professor of international relations at Oxford; that she is an outstanding member of the National Council of Women of Great Britain and secretary of its colonies and dependencies committee; that she has been a leader in child-welfare work in London, and that for the past few years she has worked closely with Lady Aberdeen, from whose idea has grown the A. C. W. W., one of the biggest nonpolitical women's organizations in the world.

Exchange Information.

Yesterday it was the A. C. W. W. that Miss Zimmern particularly wanted to discuss. Explaining at the outset that it comprises 75 rural women's groups in 30 countries on 5 continents, she emphasized that its purpose is "to promote and maintain helpful relations between the country women's and homemakers' associations of all nations, and to give any possible help in their development."

"It works this way," he went on. "If a woman in New Zealand wants to learn how to grow tulips, our London office can put her in touch with a woman in Holland, who can tell her all there is to know on that subject. By the same arrangement, a French homemaker can exchange recipes with her American sister. Improvements in home management, discovered by a Swedish farm woman in Sweden can help a rural housewife in Switzerland. Practical hints on housekeeping in South Africa can help a rural woman in Ceylon.

"As a result, bonds of friendship are cemented between country women of all nations, viewpoints are broadened and international understanding is established in a manner that proves helpful to all concerned."

There is a real need for an organization of this type, providing an avenue of contact between homemakers of many lands, she continued. "Lady Aberdeen thought so in 1929, when as a member of the International Council of Women, she discovered that all feminine groups were represented except those from rural sections. She suggested then that the latter send delegates to London to discuss the possibility of having an organization of its own. The informal meeting that resulted, attended by women from 21 countries, developed into a full-fledged association that in 1930 held its first triennial conference in Vienna and was attended by representatives of 31 rural women's organizations from 26 countries."

MISS ELSIE M. ZIMMERN.

Miss Grace Frysinger.

Among the three American members appointed to the liaison committee of the A. C. W. W. at that time was Miss Grace Frysinger, of the United States Department of Agriculture Extension Service, who is now helping arrange for the Washington conference.

The center of the A. C. W. W., since its beginning, has been the London office, Miss Zimmern said. "There, every month women representing associations from other countries gather to discuss and carry out plans affecting all of them," she continued. "There, rural homemakers visiting London from all parts of the globe find a welcome; for this is the only international meeting place for country women in the world."

Staff members at the headquarters conduct an annual study of some topic of common interest to affiliated organizations. A book, "Food in the Country Home," has just been completed and will be brought out at the June conference here. "It contains 500 recipes and will have the same format as this volume," said Miss Zimmern, as she produced a thick, paper-backed volume with pages full of fascinating descriptions of merry-making in all nations. "Then, too, we have a monthly magazine, 'The Countrywoman,' which is the only international publication devoted exclusively to the rural woman's interests."

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

By Pattie Ellicott.

MRS. JAMES P. POPE.

When it is birthday time in the household of Senator and Mrs. James P. Pope, of Idaho, there is certain to be a demand at the feast honoring the day for one of the family's favorite dishes—veal cutlets.

There is good reason for this, too. When one tires of beef, lamb and the other standard meats veal will be found a welcome change on the dinner menu.

Of the various veal cuts available the veal cutlet is perhaps the most appetizing, economical and certain to delight practically all palates.

Veal Cutlets.

Use slices of veal from leg cut ½ inch thick. Wipe, remove bone and skin, then cut in pieces for serving. The long, irregular-shaped pieces may be rolled and fastened with small wooden skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; dip in flour, egg and crumbs and fry (saute) slowly, until well browned, in salt pork fat or butter.

Place in stewpan and pour over 2 cups brown sauce or tomato sauce. Cook slowly one hour or until cutlets are tender. Cutlets may be cooked in casserole dish in hot oven.

Veal may be cooked first in boiling water until tender, then crumbled and fried. The water in which veal was cooked may be used in making sauce or stock can be made from bones and trimmings. Arrange on hot platter, pour sauce around cutlets and garnish with parsley.

Famous Men Vote in Favor Of Beefsteak

Corned Beef and Chicken Run a Close Second; Apple Pie Dessert.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 12.—A safe offering, if you wish to tickle the palate of a prominent citizen, the National Restaurant Association advises, is beefsteak.

From a national survey in which the tastes of 15 Governors, four United States Senators, and notables in the cinema, literary, business and athletic fields were sought, steak emerged as the general favorite. Corned beef and chicken gave it a close race, however.

The survey was conducted by the association in connection with the celebration of the tercentenary of the first public eating house, the Stadt Herburgh, founded in New York City, in 1636.

Several of those questioned responded with their favorite dishes all down the line of the full course dinner. J. Edgar Hoover disclosed that he enjoyed filet of sole, which led among fish.

Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus of North Carolina averred he had two choices—bean soup and beef stew and cautioned, "It isn't true that just hot water and beans make bean soup, or that chunks of meat, potatoes and onions make beef stew. The essential element is a cook who knows how."

Among the steak preferers were Senator Frederick Van Nuys, of Indiana, Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri; Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, Gov. R. L. Cochran of Nebraska, and Gov. James V. Allred of Texas. Gov. Frank Merriam of California voted for corned beef and cabbage, Gov. Charles H. Martin of Oregon for lamb, Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania for guinea hen and Gov. Henry W. Nice of Maryland for his State's fried chicken.

Mr., Mrs. Guy Hicks On Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hicks, who were married Saturday and are now at the Cavalier Hotel in Virginia Beach, Va., on their wedding trip, left yesterday for Charleston, S. C., where they will spend a week. From there they will return to West Falls Church, Va., to remain a week with Mrs. Hicks' parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Worthington, before going to Stapleton, Staten Island, to make their home.

Mrs. Hicks is the former Miss Charlotte Carmody Worthington whose marrige to Mr. Hicks, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hicks, of Rockville, Md., took place Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in the rectory of Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown. The Rev. Father Moakley performed the ceremony. Mrs. Frances Pierce Johnson and Mr. William Colbert were the only attendants of the bridal couple.

Honey Provides Delicious Spread On All Breads

Product of Bee Also Found to Be Fine Ingredient in Tasty Baking.

LONG BEFORE MAN learned to convert the juices of cane and beet-root into sugar, honey sweetened the primeval diet. Today the first confection pleases man just as much as it did his early ancestors, but instead of scooping it out of wild bees' hives with his paws and then licking his fingers, he prefers to take it with a spoon from a dainty china table hive into a suitably receptive breadstuff. Honey should be slightly warmed before using so that it will "drizzle" nicely. To do this, place the honey jar in warm—not hot—water for about ten minutes.

This is the time of the year to have hot biscuits and honey, muffins and honey, scones and honey, orange biscuits and honey, or to use honey as a sweetening in any one of a number of delicious combinations with wheat flour. Honey is sweetness plus flavor and this must be borne in mind when selecting a foundation for it. The lighter colored honeys, such as clover, orange blossom, sage and alfalfa are mildly flavored and can be used on fruit breads with great success. The more highly flavored honeys, such as buckwheat, should be served with a plain foundation. Buckwheat honey adds to the spicy flavor of gingerbread, date bars and nut cookies when substituted for sugar. In replacing sugar with honey in recipes, reduce the liquid to be used one-fifth for each cup of honey used.

Sweet Milk Biscuits.

2 cups soft wheat flour (sifted before measuring)
¾ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons shortening
Sweet milk to make soft dough (about 2-3 cup)

Sift the flour, salt and baking powder together; add shortening, and cut or rub into the flour; add the milk to make a soft dough; roll ½ inch thick, cut, and bake in a hot oven (400-450 degrees F.).

Sour Milk Biscuits.

2 cups soft wheat flour (sifted before measuring).
2-3 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons shortening.
Buttermilk to make soft dough (about 2-3 cup).

Personality and Luck

DO YOU BELIEVE in luck?

Is it really luck, or personality, that causes such a lot of difference in the success and happiness of certain people you know?

Take Harry, who's pulling on the wishbone. He's rather a grouch, never bothers to say a friendly word or notice the likes and dislikes of others. He's not doing well as a salesman, though he is intelligent and good-looking.

What a difference it would make to Harry if he would really take a good look at himself—think of his good points as assets, and his weak spots as "in the red"—then go after that surly manner and get rid of it—make an art of attracting people! Quite a difference would show up in his sales!

Sue, the other wish-bone splitter, had a different problem. She's the soul of ease and charm today. But she used to be so bashful it was painful. One day she made up her mind to end that shyness. Modern psychology put her on the right track. Up to that time she had thought people had personality "born in them," like the color of their eyes.

You, too, can solve your own personality problems with the aid of our 40-page booklet, Improving Your Personality. Let an eminent psychologist show you what personality really is, how to mold it, to develop your best points. Watch those old, hampering drawbacks disappear!

Send 15c for our booklet, IMPROVING YOUR PERSONALITY, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Freedom Talk About Children Merely Excuse

Influence Over Youngsters Held Impossible to Abandon.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MUCH of the modern jargon of freedom for children is merely an indirect way of demanding freedom for the adults, especially for women on whom most of the care of children has always fallen.

Housework can be done by machinery, but no one has yet found the machine that will tend babies and advise youngsters. The result is a lot of loose talk about not influencing children. "Give them freedom to express themselves."

It is useless to talk of not influencing other people's lives. Simply by living one limits other lives to some extent, and by these limitations modifies them in some way. There are insects whose lives are finished when they have performed the function of breeding for which apparently they exist; but even so, by choice of mate and habitat, they have already influenced the lives of their offspring before they were born.

How much more true must this be of the higher animals who exert some choice in selection, and most of all in man, who is the freest choice of all living things.

If then, one begins to influence one's children so early, it is impossible to stop influencing them at any time of one's life. One can cease consciously to guide and direct them, but the influence is still there, and the very taking off one's hands affects them. It is a useless gesture and a shirking of responsibility.

Too much interference is bad. It rouses rebellion or makes the child dependent. But guidance and good example are essential. Parents cannot lead one life and expect their children to lead another. Whether they like it or not, what they do and say, even what they think, leaves its mark on the child, and for good or bad influences his life for all time.

Women to Conduct Democratic Drive

As an innovation in convention customs, the women's division of the Democratic National Committee will sponsor a series of regional conferences in connection with the Philadelphia convention to decide just what technique the feminine members of the party will employ in campaigning for the Democratic ticket throughout the country this fall.

Today Democratic women approach the 1936 convention with the asurance that they will have a definite hand in nominating President Roosevelt and planning the platfrom. They will work shoulder to shoulder with the men in the campaign, but, aside from this, they will send out their own speakers and dispatch their own publicity in a direct appeal to the feminine electorate of the country. How the campaign talents and skills of women can best be utilized will be discussed "in between times" at Philadelphia.

The regional conferences will be in the form of breakfast meetings, one each morning from June 24 to 27. They will be held in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, the convention headquarters, and will commence each morning at 8 o'clock and close at 10 o'clock —in ample time for the women to reach the convention hall for the sessions.

Molded Refrigerator Salad Pleases Palate

At this time of year there is nothing more appropriate than a molded salad. This one whose ingredients include cottage cheese and whipped cream can be prepared successfully the day before for the following day's luncheon or dinner party if stored all night in your refrigerator.

Cottage Cheese Is Base for Salad

Combination to Perk Up Meals for Spring Is Easily Made.

Can Be Served as Entree at Dinner, or as Main Luncheon Dish.

CREAMY cottage cheese salad with crisp salad greens, paper-thin slices of fresh cucumbers, hot corn sticks with butter, is a delightful combination to perk up your spring meals. The taste-appealing cottage cheese is blended with light, fluffy whipped cream and gelatin for the soft, snowy mold. Salad greens, cucumbers, and a French salad dressing add just the right tartness to this bland delicacy which is so rich in food value.

You can use it as an entree for dinner, a main dish for luncheon or supper, or as a salad or dessert. For the latter, it is particularly nice served on a bed of crisp salad greens—lettuce, water cress, endive or romaine, surrounded with sections of grapefruit, orange and a small bunch of seedless white grapes, arranged in systematic rows. This attractive dish is guaranteed to be a culinary success.

Here is the secret of this delicious salad mold. The cottage cheese is put through a sieve to make it light and creamy. When blended with whipped cream it has the texture of cream cheese and the flavor of cottage cheese. When serving with salad greens and vegetables, add one teaspoon of onion juice or finely chopped chives for flavor. With the fruit combination use one teaspoon of lemon juice in place of the onion juice.

Your refrigerator will make it convenient to prepare the cheese mold the day before, or several hours in advance. The constant temperature of an electrically controlled refrigerator will keep your salad in a perfect jelled state until you are ready to serve it.

This recipe will serve eight fairly large servings:

2 cup: cottage cheese
1 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon gelatin
¼ cup hot water
¼ cup cold water
2 cucumbers
1 teaspoon onion juice
Water cress or lettuce.
French dressing

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes, then dissolve in hot water. Put cheese through sieve, add gelatin, mix until light and fluffy and combine with stiffly beaten cream. Put in mold and place in refrigerator to set.

Peel cucumbers and slice in slices one-fourth inch thick. To flute cucumber edges scrape cucumbers after peeling from tip to tip with tines of a fork. Remove centers from cucumbers with thimble or small knife. Place in ice water until crisp.

When ready to serve arrange water cress on serving plate; place molded cheese mixture on bed of water cress and garnish with row of cucumber rings. Serve with French dressing.

When making corn sticks be sure to have the buttered corn stick pans piping hot before adding the batter.

Corn Sticks.

½ cup flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup yellow corn meal
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons melted butter

Sift together dry ingredients. Add corn meal, egg and milk, which have been mixed together, and butter. Bake in buttered, hot iron corn stick pans in hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 30 to 40 minutes. Makes 9 large or 12 small sticks.

Prizes to Be Given For Soup Recipes

Do you know how to get quick cooking results by dressing up prepared foods? Can you, for example, prepare a delicious soup from the ingredients of two or three cans?

Certainly the modern woman has taken adventage of prepared products, but she does more than that. She uses her ingenuity and imagination in combining two or more of these canned or prepared foods to create new and interesting dishes that are quickly and easily made.

What are your favorite canned or prepared food combinations? The Post is asking for them next week. For the best recipes five cash awards will be offered. The first prize is $5; the second, $3, and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

Write out your favorite combination of canned or prepared products, giving full details of your recipe. Send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your recipe in time to reach this office not later than next Saturday.

War Changed Women, Author Finds in Survey

Weaker Sex Now Holds More Than Half of World's Wealth.

Women may be just potential mothers to Hitler and Mussolini, but in the United States they are still a rather important part of public life—particularly in its spending phases.

According to conclusions drawn from a survey of women's activities in this country woman's position has changed more in the last 20 years than in the preceding century and a half. Reasons for this were given in a recent talk before the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, when Nancy Hale, author, spoke on the subject, "What Interests Women—and Why."

The World War had much to do with the change in women's interests, Miss Hale said. Since then woman has gained suffrage and greater leisure, and has enlarged her viewpoint through the influence of women's pages in newspapers and magazines devoted to feminine subjects until "today every one with something to see wants to know what will interest women," she explained, as she pointed out that today in America women control 90 per cent of our total spending power.

"Eleven million women are wage earners," she continued. "Women own a little over half of the Nation's wealth. Eighty billions of insurance is in their name. Any one with something to sell has got to know what will interest women."

Discussing types of women upon which she based her observations, Miss Hale said they were "the best off, the most literate, and therefore the most interesting group of potential consumers." She added this class is also the most important, since it is these women "who read the advertisements and serve as the model, the ideal, for other millions of women ni this country."

Children Like Swishy Skirts —Comfy to Run and Play In

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.,
For many years assistant professor of household arts, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, N. Y.

The tiny ones love to have free, easy-to-wear clothes with skirts which swish about in running. Such a darling little style with favored, puffed sleeves is suggested in today's pattern. It has lots of leg space. Its semi-snug bodice buttons up to a new-looking cape collar. It covers the upper arms so cunningly and smartly. It may be sleeveless for midsummer wear. Bias binds can finish the armholes. A calico print made this practical dress. It can, of course, be developed in innumerable tissues as gingham, percale, dimity, challis prints, organdie, etc.

Style No. 2715 is designed for sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1⅞ yards of 35-inch material and ⅜ yard of 35-inch contrasting and ½ yard of 1-inch ribbon for bows.

Send ten cents (10c) (coin is preferred) for pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. The Spring Fashion Book costs 10 cents. Send for your copy today. Address order to The Washington Post Pattern Department, 160 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Tuna Fish Salad Is a Favorite Washington Dish

TUNA FISH SALAD is a favorite Washington dish. At least this is the deduction after judging the recipes that were entered last week in The Post's contest for canned tuna fish recipes. There were many other interesting tuna recipes, however, and two very unusual ones are numbered among the five prize winners.

First prize, $5, goes to Mrs. Fred Smith, 719 Third street northeast, for her recipe for tuna fish roll sublime; second prize, $3, is won by Mrs. John Murphy, 2515 Thirteenth street northwest, for her recipe for molded tuna fish salad with cucumber sauce. The three remaining prizes of $1 eacn go to Mrs. F. C. Fuller, 2016 North Monroe street, Baltimore, Md., for her recipe for tuna stacks; to Mrs. R. J. McNutt, Raphine, Va., for her recipe for tuna fish souffle, and to Mrs. Henry T. Boswell, 3833 Windon place northwest, for her recipe for seafood surprise.

Tuna Fish Roll Sublime.

Sift 2 cups flour with 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Blend with 4 teaspoons butter. Stir in 2-3 to 1 cup milk. Knead lightly on well-floured board. Roll in sheet 2-3 as wide as long. Combine 2 cups tuna fish, 1 cup medium white sauce and 1 egg slightly beaten. Spread on dough. Roll as jelly roll. Brush with milk or melted butter. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) about 30 minutes. Serve hot with stuffed olive sauce.

Stuffed Olive Sauce.

Molded Tuna Salad.

1 cup canned tuna, flaked
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon flour
1 teaspoon dry mustard
Few grains cayenne
2 egg yolks
1½ tablespoons butter
¾ cup milk
¼ cup vinegar
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water

Mix all ingredients except tuna, gelatin and cold water. Cook over hot water until slightly thickened. Add gelatin which has been softened in cold water. Stir in tuna. Chill in individual molds. Serve on lettuce leaves with cucumber sauce.

Cucumber Sauce.

½ cup cream
¼ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 large cucumber

Beat cream until stiff. Add salt, pepper, vinegar and cucumber, which has been pared, cut very fine and drained.

Tuna Stacks.

6 tablespoons shortening
6 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups milk
3 tablespoons sherry Flavoring (optional)
1-3 cup grated cheese
1¼ cups shredded tuna fish
1½ cups pancake flour
1 cup water
½ cup milk
1 egg
2 tablespoons chopped chives or onion

Melt shortening over low heat, add flour and salt, stir to a smooth paste. Add milk gradually, stir and cook until thick. Add sherry flavoring, if used, and grated cheese. Set in warm place.

Combine shredded tuna with ½ cup of the prepared sauce. Mix pancake flour with water, milk and beaten egg. Beat until smooth. Bake on hot griddle, turning only once. This makes about five 8-inch pancakes.

Spread tuna fish mixture between pancakes, pour about 1 cup sauce over top; sprinkle with chopped chives or onion. Cut into pie-shaped pieces for serving. Serve hot with the remainder of sauce.

Tuna Fish Souffle.

1 can of tuna—12 ounces—separated in flakes and seasoned with salt and pepper to taste and the juice of 1 lemon. Cook ½ cup of bread crumbs in ½ cup of milk for ten minutes. Add fish to this mixture. Beat yolks of 3 eggs until thick and light colored. Add to the mixture and fold in lightly the egg whites which have been beaten stiff. Turn into a well-greased baking dish and bake until firm in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Serve immediately.

Seafood Surprises.

1 cup yellow cornmeal
3 cups boiling water
1 teaspoon salt

Cook the above in the double boiler for two hours, then mix it with the following:

1½ cups of tuna fish (or 1 small can of tuna) that has been flaked
¾ teaspoons of minced onion

About ½ teaspoon celery salt or the tops of celery which has been dried and powdered
¼ teaspoon pepper

Put this mixture in a loaf pan. Then put it in the refrigerator to set. When it is firm, slice and roll it in cracker meal and fry in fat until brown. Serve garnished with watercress and cucumber sliced with tomato.

Avocado Affords Variety for Menu

Sieved Fruit Adds Flavor to Eggnog.

Avocados are increasing in popularity each year. Here are just a few of the numerous ways in which they may be used to brighten your menus, plus a rule for testing the fruit and storing it in your home.

Sieved avocado adds a delicate flavor which pleasantly disguises a plain eggnog as a change from the frequently used chocolate. Convalescent children are aided in the getting well process, since avocados are especially easy to digest and the beneficent vitamin B aids appetite.

An old salad favorite, sufficiently dressed up for party occasions, but not depending on extravagant materials for its gala appearance, is molded Waldorf with sliced avocado, added in the proportion of customary fruit ingredients.

In sandwiches avocados may be used to replace lettuce for green content and will remain fresh and flavorful for long periods of waiting. They blend perfectly with the usual condiments and dressings which go with sandwich ingredients.

When picked avocados are still firm, and must soften for edibility. To test for softness take an avocado in both hands and press gently with both palms. Do not mistake the elasticity which comes first for softness. Refrigerate only after the fruit is soft, storing in the warmest part of the refrigerator.

Moisture Restored.

A large percentage of the moisture which the sun evaporates in drying fruits is restored in preparing the fruit for the table. One pound of dried apricots more than doubles its bulk in cooking, yielding ten one-third cupful portions.

Removing Stains.

Stuffed Olive Sauce Adds Piquant Touch to Tasty Plate.

Poor Pie Crust Avoided by Use Of Cake Base

THERE are always desserts to take the place of pie if you feel that you can't make a satisfactory crisp, flaky pie crust. If pastry is one of your cooking weaknesses substitute instead the new cake crust. Simply bake a thin layer of good white cake. When it is cool, add a cooked pineapple custard filling and top it with meringue in the usual way. Pineapple fluff pie made this way is delicious beyond description. The men will take to it, too, and ask for second helpings. Here are the directions:

Cake Crust.

¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons evaporated milk
1 tablespoon water
½ cup sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon vanilla
1 egg white.

Cream butter and sugar. Add diluted milk and flour which has been sifted with baking powder alternately. Add flour and fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Bake in a layer cake pan. Temperature for baking—375 degrees F. (a moderate oven). Baking time, seven minutes.

Remove the cake to a cookie sheet or cooler and when it is cool spread with this pineapple filling:

6 tablespoons sugar
2½ tablespoons cornstarch
4 egg yolks
½ cup evaporated milk diluted with ½ cup water
1½ cups crushed pineapple
¼ teaspoon salt

Mix 4 tablespoons sugar and 1 tablespoon cornstarch with beaten egg yolks and diluted milk. Cook in double boiler until thickened. Mix remaining sugar and corn starch with crushed pineapple. Cook over low flame until thickened. Combine mixtures and cook together 3 minutes longer. Add salt and cool. Spread on cake. Top with meringue made by beating 3 egg whites stiffly and folding in ½ cup confectioner's sugar and 1-3 cup coconut. Brown in a slow oven until crusty.

Amount serves six.

Cooling System At Lotus Takes Starring Role

By Chanticleer.

With the sun rising early and blazing away at the citizenry these days, the Lotus reminds us that its cooling system really takes the star role this week, although the eight dancing Mayettes are practically tied for honors. But the air-conditioning plant does get the star dressing room in the line-up of attractions.

In addition to the dancing chorus are Beryl and Martinez in ballroom, modernistic and Portuguese folk dances; Don and Jean, tap bolero specialists; Marion Lawler, in a bit of rhythm and song, and the home folks, Bill Stricklnad and his band and Judy Ellington, his vocalist. Al Norton at the helm.

More air-conditioning news. The Embassy Tap Room has installed a plant which makes coming in off the hot sidewalk like encountering a breath from the Arctic.

Just to remind you once again. Moe Baer and his orchestra are now at the Hamilton's Rainbow Room.

The Mayfair's Jack Campbell has spent 19 of his 24 years on a piano bench. That is, not too literally. And 12 of the 19 have been as a professional musician. Jack is one of those precocious fellows who started making his art pay when he was in knee pants. And like a lot of fellows who sit down and play your requests with the greatest of ease, there's real musicianship always in the background. Jack has had concert work, plenty of orchestra soloing and knows his Chopin and Mozart.

What a busy spring at the Shoreham! At least, socially speaking. A sort of splurge of entertaining has hit the village with tea tete-a-tetes, to late suppers. No word definitely yet about the Terrace but something is expected soon from the inner sanctums of a spectacular nature. Barnes will be the chief attraction again, but he and Maxim Lowe are working out some specials.

Elenore Tennis, a dainty bit of femininity, actually a.d literally "trips the light fan' stic" as her contribution this week to the floor show. She is what is meant by grace, beauty and loveliness.

That Carolina Club Orchestra at the Dude Ranch long since has become completely acclimated—and the story goes that they have now so well hit their stride that motorists on the Baltimore road are pulling into the Ranch's big parking yard just to drop in for a slice of the music. Johnny Pinkard, the singing accordionist, is reported to be taking the feminine guests by storm. He's one of those tall and strong dark gentlemen. The floor show includes Randell and Kent, ballroom team, specializing in musical comedy routines, and Charley Vent, who proves he is a soft shoe expert. And Dixie Dyer, of course.

Hughie O'Donnell, master of ceremonies at the La Paree, plans to take a vacation soon, and do some teaching. He's a grand impersonator of Bill Robinson, Pat Rooney and other great hoofers. He plans to associate himself with the Joe Brown studios. That'll keep him right here in town, of course.

Hillary Gabriel is that new dancer at Maryland Club Gardens. She's been in this country only two years, being a Ziegfeld importation, but she knows her Monte Carlo Ballet Russe and Folies Bergere. Honey Davis also is singing at the Gardens now.

Tuesday, the 19th: That's the opening for the Cocoanut Grove, Fifth and K streets northwest. With a 14-piece orchestra and a large floor show. Thirty chefs were interviewed with a view of emphasizing good victuals at the new spot. Special attraction: A tap room, to be known as the Blue Room with an open bar. Air cooled.

Many of those Sarron-Miller fight fans dropped in at the Ambassador's Hi-Hat for refreshments of the Hi-Hat special order after the battle the other night. Referees and fighters and big names in the sports world literally took the place over. And latest addition to the bar menu, a Preakness cocktail! Kitty Simons received the congratulations of a high former Government official that night, who forecast a great future for the diminutive singing star.

Dancing at Shoreham and La Paree

80 St. Louis Jobless 'Besiege' City Hall

St. Louis, May 12 (AP).—A "hunger army" of 80 unemployed men and women, who failed yesterday in an attempted second "siege" of the city hall, returned today to re-occupy the headquarters of the St. Louis relief administration. Demanding immediate allotments of food, they said they would stay until they got them.

The demonstrators had abandoned the relief offices, which they first occupied Saturday morning, to march yesterday to the city hall, where the board of aldermen was in session.

On the Air Today

Well, Cheerio is back on the WMAL morning schedule. Evidently the radio citizenry raised a loud voice for the Jim McGrath "Morning Prelude" was just beginning to reach a point of maximum usefulness to the station when the change was made back to the perennial dispenser of morning cheer.

Although I have not referred to the matter after my observations late in April, when "Cheerio" was dropped at WMAL, I have watched and waited with no little interest. For Cheerio is not a program; he's an institution. He's not a man talking in a studio; he's the personification of hope and inspiration and comfort to a lot of persons.

Perhaps you do not care for his half hour. I am perfectly willing to confess I am not sufficiently far along with my morning activities to listen to him. But there are many who do.

On the other hand, the Godfreys, Hittenmarks and Browns do not satisfy all the music lovers, either, with their Timekeeping and Musical Clocks and Sun Dials. Jim McGrath evidently was on a fair road to establishing some sort of a precedent in early musical programs.

But the Cheerio votes obviously were in larger numbers than the "Prelude" supporters.

By summer, the National Broadcasting Co. will begin its six months' program observing its tenth year as a network organization. The period of celebration gets under way, as a matter of record, on May 18 and ends with the observation of the date of its first program on November 15. Participating in these anniversary specialties will be stars of opera, stage and screen, conductors of symphonies and dance band and other celebrities who have literally grown up with the network.

You may remember that first broadcast in November, 1926. It lasted four hours, including 23 stations and extended from New York to Kansas City and up to Boston.

I picked up the phone Monday, following the noontime "Curbstone Queries," and a voice that sounded strangely familiar said he had heard and enjoyed the program and wanted to know whether it was in order to answer a question asked in the course of the street querying. I assured him it was and the talk went on about a voters' franchise for the District and traffic problems. I asked the caller whether he would not like to come down some noon and take part in one of the broadcasts. He said he might get "mike fright" and asked whether his voice would be satisfactory. It was obvious he wouldn't have "mike" fright and his voice was perfect. And—strangely familiar. Just as I placed the receiver on the hook I realized it must have been either Parks Johnson or Jerry Belcher, NBC's "Vox Pop" interrogators. A check at NBC's local offices revealed the boys were in the city, but no end of checking on hotels ever resulted in my locating them. Which proves, I guess, that he who thinks slowly—misses a very delightful visit. J. H. H.

Alleged German Spy Is Sentenced in Paris

Paris, May 12 (AP).—Karl Theodor Drucke, alleged agent of the German Gestapo (secret police), was convicted today of instigating espionage and sentenced to 3 years in prison.

He was charged with trying to persuade an unidentified Frenchman to provide him with military documents, including data on the location of troops in the air service.

Charles Galliath, former official of the French Saar administration, arrested by Nazi police April 22 while on his way to see his sick mother in Saarbruecken, was released by German authorities and returned home.

Culbertson on Bridge

Few things are more inconsistent than attempting to apply safety measures to a situation that patently calls for sheer boldness. Theoretically, slams should not be bid unless two conditions exist: First, that there will be a reasonably good play for the contract, and, second, that if it is defeated, the penalty will not be severe. Unfortunately, this theory is not always observed to the letter and partners are bound to find themselves, from time to time, in high contracts that have been bid more enthusiastically than wisely. Having already assumed certain risk in the bidding, it is only consistent to play with equal boldness. Had the declarer in today's hand followed this philosophy, he would have been over 3,000 points better off.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	2 hearts	3 hearts	Double
Pass	Pass	4 dimds.	Double
4 spades	Pass	6 spades	Double
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

As may be seen, bidding was overly aggressive throughout. South's original spade bid, although shaded for honor-trick strength, probably was the most legitimate of all the bids because of his good distribution. North, although not using the asking bid system, still had no right to cue-bid in the opponents' suit. He did not have good enough spade support, considering that neither of his two minor suits was anything like solid. His jump to the spade slam was almost equally optimistic, since his partner had not shown a willingness to rebid freely. (Witness his pass to the double of three hearts.) East's double and South's redouble were equally optimistic.

Had West opened the queen of hearts, declarer never could have made his contract since, after winning the ace of spades, West again could have ruffed the dummy and, by doing so, would have set up his own eight of trumps. His club lead, however, gave the declarer a chance that should have been joyfully seized. The ace of clubs obviously was the correct play, to be followed by a small spade from the dummy. East's queen would be smothered by declarer's king which, in turn, would go to West's ace, but declarer always could use one of dummy's high spades and his own ten for drawing the adverse trumps after returning to his hand by means of a diamond ruff. Obviously, he could have discarded two of his hearts on the A-K of diamonds, and the third, if necessary, on the fifth club.

Far from delighting the declarer, the club opening lead put him in a funk. He won the club in his own hand and now, to avoid the loss of two trump tricks, had to get in dummy. Afraid of a singleton club in either opponent's hand, he led a heart and ruffed it. The jack of spades followed, but when the queen covered, forcing his king, West, on winning the ace, had merely to lead a heart honor to protect his eight of trumps. Instead of making 720 points below the line, 750 for the slam, and a two-game rubber, a total of 7,170, declarer lost 400 on that hand and later lost the rubber, a total swing of the staggering amount of 3,270 points.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

More than 10,000 applications for the typist-stenographic examinations have been filed by Washington residents, it was revealed at the Civil Service Commission last night. The total number for the entire country is the greatest in the past two decades — 80,839 — exceeding by nearly 20,000 the number applying for the same examinations two years ago.

BAKER.

With the record number slated to take the tests here, the examinations will require a couple of weeks—possibly a month, with a large staff of Civil Service examiners supervising. The places in Washington have not yet been selected, but it is expected that the tests will be given in one or two of the District schools, probably beginning in July.

Hence, with the flood of applications to be classified for eligibility, etc., there remain several valuable weeks for applicants to brush up on their shorthand, typing, speed and accuracy.

The next set of examinatoins of widespread interest will be clerical, it is reported. However, Civil Service officials yesterday were silent on this project.

Dr. Solon J. Buck, director of publications, National Archives, writes on "The National Archives and the Advancement of Science" in a recent number of Science, his article being an address given by him before the American Associatoin for the Advancement of Science last January.

Graddick on Program.

Charles P. Graddick, superintendent of air mail service, will address the annual convention of the American Air Mail Society in conjunction with the Third International Philatelic Exposition at the Grand Central Palace, New York, tomorrow afternoon.

Dr. Ralph W. Phillips, instructor in animal husbandry at Massachusetts State College, Amherst, is reported to have been appointed associate animal husbandman with the Bureau of Animal Industry. He will be stationed at the National Research Center, Beltsville.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C follow your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's Theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Mitchell and Durant and other acts: screen, Cary Grant and Joan Bennett in "Big Brown Eyes"); or P, Loew's Palace (Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea in "These Three"); or C, Loew's Columbia (Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee and Slim Summerville in "Captain January").

Why Worry?

Would like so much to continue my work,
But I am only a temporary clerk.
That dismissal notice may come so soon,
I am really worrying before the end of June.

Did my very best, and was always there,
I tried so hard to do my share.
Why worry? A happy thought may end my grief,
If dismissed, I'll ask for unemployed relief.

International Exchanges.

Q. Can you explain the purpose of the International Exchange Service?—Laura M. Belknap (P).

A. The International Exchange Service is the agency of the United States Government for the exchange of scientific, literary and governmental publications with foreign governments, institutions and investigators. It receives and dispatches about 700,000 pounds of printed matter annually. It is a branch of the Smithsonian Institution.

The service was founded about 1850 by Joseph Henry and Spencer Fullerton Baird, former Smithsonian secretaries, as a means of bringing together helpfully the cultures of the Old and New worlds. About 1880 it was adopted as a bureau of the Government, which by treaty established exchange relations with nearly all the world. When Belgium and Japan suffered loss of their great libraries the former, through the World War, the latter through the great earthquake, the Exchange Service acted as the receiving and forwarding agency for material to replace these losses as far as possible.

Capper Plans Fight to Save Slums Work

Praises Alley Authority; Will Seek to Restore $300,000 Fund.

Declares It Inconceivable That Congress Should End Project.

The record of the Alley Dwelling Authority was defended yesterday in a statement issued by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, following his announcement that he would try to restore the $300,000 cut from the deficiency bill by the House.

"During the 17 months of its existance the Alley Dwelling Authority has accomplished more in clearing out the alley slums of Washington," he said, "than was accomplished in all of the preceding 19 years since Congress first took definite action."

The work of the Alley Dwelling Authority will stop abruptly on July 1, however, unless the Senate puts back the appropriation which the House Appropriations Committee eliminated despite a favorable recommendation of the Budget Bureau.

Declaring that the ADA "has a sound constructive program which promises to end all the alley slums," Senator Capper added:

"And it is doing this in a way that promises not only an end to what has been recognized as a national scandal but also promises to return the money advanced by Congress for that purpose.

Halt Is Inconceivable.

"So it is inconceivable that Congress should halt this work. Time after time during many years Congress has announced its purpose of doing away with the inhabited alleys. Today that purpose is at last in process of being realized. Certainly, Congress is not going to reverse itself."

Senator Capper, sponsor of the alley dwelling act in the Senate, recalled that the policy of clearing Washington of alley slums was inaugurated in 1907 by the then President Roosevelt in a message to Congress stating that "the residential alleys must be eliminated."

He then cited the following history of alley clearance activities since 1907:

"President Theodore Roosevelt's friend, Jacob A. Riis, made an inspection of the alleys and then appeared before a Congressional committee. He told of finding the towels of the Senate barber shop drying in a dwelling in Willowtree alley, the occupants of which were suffering from syphilis and tuberculosis. Congress promptly passed an act which resulted in wiping out most of the dwellings in that alley and substituting the present Willowtree Playground. Several houses in Willowtree alley continued to stand, however; one of them is still there.

District Is Defeated.

"During President Woodrow Wilson's administration a more determined attempt was made to deal with the inhabited alleys. A bill known as the Commissioners' Alley bill was drafted that provided for the vacation of all alley dwellings during a period of 10 years. This bill was drastically amended and when enacted as the alley dwelling act of 1914, it provided that all alley dwellings should cease to be used as dwellings within four years. Because of our entry into the World War, the effective date was twice postponed. When the act finally went into effect, a case was tkaen into the courts and the District Government was defeated. Since then this law has been inoperative. This act made no provision for redevoping the property or for rehousing the alley dwellers.

"In 1929 the National Capital Park and Planning Commission again studied the problem and in consultation with members of both the Senate and the House, drafted the present alley dwelling act which was passed by Congress and was approved by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on June 12, 1934. In accordance with the terms of the act, the President appointed the Alley Dwelling Authority which began to function in November, 1934."

Auto Mechanic Strike Spread Now Is Feared

Workers at 3 Chevrolet Agencies Walk Out in Wage Disputes.

Spread of a strike of automobile mechanics to most of the Chevrolet automobile sales agencies in the city was feared today following a walkout of mechanics at three agencies yesterday.

The strike was called by the International Association of Machinists in protest against the "piece work" wage system by which the mechanics gets a set share of the amount charged the customer that prevails in most Chevrolet agencies. The strikers want definite hourly wages with a limited number of working hours.

The three agencies affected by yesterday's tie-up were the Ourisman Chevrolet Sales Co., at 610 H street northeast; the R. L. Taylor Motor Co., at Fourteenth and T streets northwest and the Mendell Chevrolet Co., Thirteenth and Good Hope road southeast.

At the Ourisman Co. plant, where 26 men walked out, Oliver N. Garrison, business agent of the union, charged that the men were being worked as much as 50 and 60 hours a week. The strikers want 90 cents an hour and a 44-hour week, with time and half for overtime, including Saturday afternoons and Sundays.

Benjamin Ourisman, president of the company, explained that the workers are being paid on the basis of one-third of the amount charged the customer, or 66 2-3 cents an hour. Average weekly earnings run to about $35 a week, with some of the workers making as high as $50, he said.

In some of the other shops, in which strikes are contemplated, Garrison complained that the mechanics were receiving as low as 50 cents an hour.

The Labor Department has appointed Harold T. Colvin, as conciliator in the situation. Colvin has been instrumental in froning out many labor disputes here.

In the meantime, Ourisman prepared to pay off the strikers, and hinted that a new crev might be hired. At the Taylor factory only about one-half of the 25 mechanics were said to have walked out.

The Burleith Citizens Association adopted a resolution last night opposing any contemplated changes in zoning on Thirty-fifth place north of T street northwest.

Traffic Lights ForPedestrians Get Test Today

New Control System to Be Put in Use at Twelfth and F Streets.

Traffic lights for pedestrians will be turned on officially for the first time in Washington this morning at Twelfth and F streets northwest, as the Traffic Bureau experiments with the system that may be extended to all congested thoroughfares.

The new lights were installed yesterday. They have six faces. In addition to the "stop," "caution" and "go" signals, the "walk" lights will show in two directions. A special light to show before the pedestrian signal will control right and left turns.

Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge said yesterday the new system will depend entirely on the pedestrian for success.

'If those on foot obey the walk' lights, it will be successful. If they don't, there will be no use whatever in experimenting further in pedestrian control.

"The new right and left-turn signal is designed to give the walker complete protection against traffic. If the pedestrian watches the traffic signals and the 'walk' lights he will be able to cross safely," Eldridge stated.

Traffic Bureau officials said yesterday that four picked traffic policemen will be at the corner today to help acquaint the people with the new lights. Cross-walks have been painted on the street with arrows indicating where the pedestrians should walk.

At Thirteenth and F streets, officials stated, the ban on turns will be removed and the new five-face control lights will be installed if today's experiment is a success.

The lights were operated experimentally for a few minutes yesterday afternoon.

Circus to Detrain In Capital Sunday

Four trains of 100 double-length, steel cars, bearing 1600 people, 800 performers, seven herds of elephants, 1009 menagerie animals and 700 horses will arrive in Washington shortly after noon Sunday.

Twice daily, at 2 and 8 p. m. on Monday and Tuesday, the "Greatest Show on Earth" flings open its doors that the public may enter the "largest big top ever built" and see, among others, the following modest offers of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus:

A herd of the smallest pigmy elephants the world has ever known; Naitto, only girl ever to somersault on the wire; the Imperial Viennese, bareback riders in massed equestrian divertissements; Mlle. Gillette, who dives from the dome of the big top; Hugo and Mario, the human projectiles, and Amerika, who tiptoes on a flying trapeze.

Child Court Bill Attacked By Sullivan

Aid of Civic Association Says Judge Will Have Too Much Power.

Hearing to Be Continued Friday on Norton Measure.

Sudden opposition to the Norton juvenile court bill developed yesterday and forced a sub-committee of the House District Committee to continue hearings on Friday in order to give all witnesses an opportunity to testify.

George E. Sullivan, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, filed a report on behalf of the executive committee, opposing the measure on the ground that it would give too great power to the juvenile court judge.

Outlining specific objections to the bill, Sullivan complained that the assistant corporation counsel assigned to the juvenile court is practically eliminated in the proposed new setup.

"The bill has been drafted from beginning to end with the consistent idea that all power should be placed in the judge of the court," he said.

The bill was indorsed as "a great step forward" by Walter U. Ufford, of the Monday Evening Club, and by Dr. Carrie W. Smith, superintendent of the National Training School for Girls.

Dr. Smith declared that the "red tape that surrounds the present system is hazardous to children."

"I am more fearful of the results of their entanglement in this red menace," she added, "than I am in some of the red menaces which recently received considerable publicity."

She complained that the attitude toward children in the present juvenile court law is "penal, not protective."

"To make a juvenile miscreant feel that he is a criminal is one of the greatest factors in making him a confirmed criminal," Dr. Smith added.

Parks Office Will Sponsor Geological Tour.

A geological tour of Washington in quest of dinosaur bones, petrified wood, sharks' teeth and seashells will be conducted next Sunday, the office of National Capital Parks announced yesterday.

Said to be the first of its kind ever held in a large American city, the trip will be open to the public without charge except for individual transportation. It will be organized at 1 p. m. at the Mall entrance to the Natural History Building of the Smithsonian Institution.

Donald Edward McHenry, park naturalist, will be in charge of the expedition and describe the geological remains of prehistoric ages which will be inspected. The Capital has long been considered a veritable paradise for the seeker of rocks, fossils and soils which are millions of years old.

Persons without private cars may arrange for bus transportation by calling the office of National Capital Parks, National 2520.

Transit Merger Gets Approval Of Commission

Is Contingent Upon Quick Union of 2 Capital Companies.

Purchase of the controlling interest in the Washington Rapid Transit Co. by the Capital Transit Co. was formally approved by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

The Capital Transit Co. is to pay $475,913 for the bus company control. Of the total, $148,600 represents $7 a share for stock held in the name of J. E. Baker, of New York, and $327,254 is the amount of a note of the bus company held by the North American Co., a nationally powerful utilities holding company.

Approval of the deal by the commission had been expected. The commission approval is contingent on quick physical merger of the two companies. William A. Roberts, people's counsel, has contended for corporate merger as well as physical merger. He said he was afraid the 325 shares held by minority interests might be used for an exorbitant nuisance value.

No change is to be made in the fares charged by the buses which have been operated by the bus company. There will be effective, however, within a few days, free transfers between the W. R. T. buses and the C. T. buses and street cars.

15,227 Visits Made By Nurses in April

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, held at its headquarters yesterday, Acting Director Inez L. Cadell reported that the field staff had made 15,227 visits during April. Of these visits, 10,637 were made to patients unable to pay any part of the cost.

The board adopted a resolution thanking Walter Bruce Howe for legal services contributed and another resolution expressing appreciation to Councilor & Ryan for the annual audit of the association's books.

Mrs. John M. Sternhagen announced that Dr. George C. Ruhland, Dr. Martha Elliot and Dr. John W. Burke had been accepted as members of the medical advisory board.

House Asks Parley Delay To Get District Bill Data

Another postponement in a scheduled conference on the 1937 District supply bill loomed yesterday as House managers asked for more time to gather data to refute arguments of the Senators in favor of a Federal contribution of $5,700,000.

The last parley broke up a week ago in a mild row over the District tax rate, and both sides have since been gathering new material to support their contentions.

St. Patrick's Choir Fetes Mgr. Thomas On 78th Birthday

Choir singers of St. Patrick's Catholic Church last night honored their pastor, the Right Rev. Mgr. C. F. Thomas, on his seventy-eighth birthday.

Though Mgr. Thomas was the host at the Willard Hotel dinner, the choir accorded him all the deference and honor of a guest at his own party.

There were no formal speeches, but everyone had a good word for the venerable clergyman, who still walks erect and is in excellent health despite his advanced years.

Twenty-six men and women attended the dinner and reception, including Miss Jennie Glennan, choir director and organist.

Mgr. Thomas tendered the dinner because of his pride in the choir, an outstanding musical organization.

Numerous members of the church and other friends sent Mgr. Thomas their congratulations on his birthday. He received several gifts of flowers.

Mgr. Thomas, widely known in religious circles, has been rector of St. Patrick's for almost a quarter of a century. Before he returned to the church as rector, he was an assistant there as a younger man.

2 Portable School Buildings Opened

With a flag raising ceremony at noon yesterday, 75 pupils formally occupied two new portable school buildings in North Randle Highlands.

The buildings were erected by the Board of Education to save the children long walks to either Orr School, in Anacostia, or Benning School. One building is occupied by the first and second grades, while the third and fourth grade children have the other.

Narcotics Bill For District Wins Favor

A favorable report on the District narcotics bill, either with or without amendments, was indicated yesterday after a House subcommittee headed by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, had listened to witnesses indorse the measure in principle yesterday morning.

The District Commissioners, in a formal report, explained that there is no provision in the District law prohibiting the manufacture or possession of narcotic drugs.

While the Harrison narcotics act is applicable to Washington, situations arise in the States, with regard to the manufacture, sale and possession of drugs, which are not covered by the act.

Twenty-nine States have adopted the uniform narcotic drug act, the Commissioners said, and it has been approved by the American Medical Association and the American Bar Association. The District bill, which has passed the Senate, is modeled after this law.

Various minor amendments to the bill were offered yesterday by Dr. V. B. Norelli, of the District Retail Druggists Association, and Dr. Augustus C. Taylor, president of the District Pharmacists Association.

During a discussion of drugs Dr. Taylor said that the wide-spread belief that the marihuana weed, which grows in nearby Maryland, is a dangerous narcotic is "greatly exaggerated" as there is actually little "dope" in the weed.

About The Showshops

"A MESSAGE TO GARCIA." From the brief and hurriedly written tribute to the man who does his duty, by the late Elbert Hubbard and printed in The Philistine of March, 1899, Twentieth Century-Fox has reconstructed a stirring melodrama of the Spanish-American War era that deviates only a little from the historic incident upon which it was based. It is acted effectively by a cast of note.

BELL.

To be sure, the Cuban jungles through which Lieut. Rowan, U. S. A., makes his way, in the picture, seem surprisingly like temperate zone morasses, but the Spanish spoken in broken colloquies throughout the action, for once, is authentic and correct, save for an occasional slip by those cast in the principal American roles, and, altogether, the story holds together remarkably well. It is fairly dripping with suspense in its closing sequences and always is thrilling. There is a good deal of bad marksmanship in it, but that is excusable since no film can get very far with all its stellar figures killed off early in the plot!

The piece has been well cast. John Boles is the hero of the narrative in the role of Lieut. Rowan, an actual figure in the Cuban war for liberty, still among the living, I believe, as Col. Andrew S. Rowan. Wallace Berry is cast in a picturesque role as Sergt. Dory, a renegade marine, with a fine flair for finding articles that never were lost and a past master at the gentle art of the double-cross. In the end, this fellow turns out to be more of a hero than the hero and all is forgiven. Barbara Stanwyck would be more acceptable as Senorita Lita Madero if she would permit her beauty-shop make-up to become just a tiny bit smudged during days of wandering through jungle thickets and undergrowth and swimming muddy rivers. Not an eyelash ever lost its curl!

However, this is quibbling about a picture which, in the large view, will afford an exciting hour or so of heroics that would have done even the heart of Fra Elbertus good.

• • • •

It was a particularly happy thought on the part of the management of Loew's Fox to book "A Message to Garcia" for the week in which John Boles will be appearing in person as star of the stage portion of the entertainment. His personal appearance on the boards will be so different from his disheveled, tattered and tortured appearance on the screen that the contrast between the two ought considerably to enhance the histrionic batting average of an actor who, on occasion, finds it not impossible to lose himself in his role. Then, too, there is that voice. John does not sing in "Garcia." Neither, thank heaven, does Wally Berry! It is Noah who is the vocalist of that family.

• • • •

Speaking of music, "A Message to Garcia" opens with an inspiring burst of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," rousingly played by an invisible band, and then swings liltingly into the more limpid strains of "Good-by, Dolly, I Must Leave You," both popular hits of the period of which the picture treats. As a tribute to the memory of the doughty Dory, killed in the discharge of the first honorable act he ever committed, the film ends to the martial tune of "From the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli," probably played by that same band. This definitely makes Wallace Beery the star of the whole goings-on—which is all right with me. He is, from every standpoint except that of military history.

The indefatigable Mr. Norman Markwell stops by the drama desk to invite a little emphasis on the fact that "Tobacco Road," the charade which he again is harbingering, opens in the National Theater on Sunday night, just as it did upon the occasion of its first visit a few weeks ago. Unlike that engagement, however, the one impending will not embrace an extra Friday matinee. The afternoon performances will be on Wednesday and Saturday. Owing to the suddenness of this return booking, mail orders are not being accepted, but seats are currently obtainable at the boxoffice, where they went on sale Monday.

Washington's first "All-Star Cartoon Show" will be presented for one performance only at the Tivoli Theater, Fourteenth street and Park road, on Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock. While there have been previous programs of Walt Disney subjects, others of Popeye, the Sailor, and the like, this is the first magic lantern show that ever will have combined them all in one hilarious bill. Two Mickey Mouse cartoons, two Silly Symphonies, two Popeyes, two Merrie Melodies, a Technicolor cartoon, an Edgar Bergen ventriloquial comedy and an Our Gang comedy will make up the Saturday roster. Some fun for all you kiddies not under 3 or over 103!

• • • •

"Ecstasy," the Czechoslovakian prize-winning bit of cinematographic symbolism—or is that too hot to handle?—will begin its fourth consecutive week at the Belasco Theater on Saturday. And they burned the first prints that reached this country! Or was that merely spontaneous combustion?

Guy Bates Post, distinguished actor now playing character roles in Hollywood, attended college and studied law in San Francisco before going on the stage. Now, 40 years later, he will be seen on the Earle screen, beginning Friday, as the judge in "The Case Against Mrs. Ames," co-starring Madeleine Carroll and George Brent.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Extra—Extra.

Hollywood, May 12.

The extra girl continued to tell her tale. She said: "When a stranger comes up to speak to us on the set, we suspect he's on the make until proven innocent. There's a grapevine system. We know what to expect of certain actors—and their stooges."

She went on to say that the two favorite topics of conversation of the extra on the set are sex and diet. The extra girl knows all the answers. She has to. For all the questions are flung at her.

Diet is also important. The young extra gal knows she must keep her figure. She knows that clothes and looks alone don't make the man.

• • • •

What does the extra do on the set while waiting to be part of the mob scene? Some read. The favorite reading matter of the extra is the Reader's Digest. Some read plays. Cheap sensational novels go big. The other pastimes are knitting and playing bridge. The men favor poker.

An extra, especially female, arriving in Hollywood follows a formula path. They are going to "take the town."

• • • •

For three months, the extra girl goes like a streak. She is seen at the night clubs. She is seen always with a man, and she sets a merry pace. Then Hollywood stamps her. She is catalogued, as everything and every one in Hollywood is.

• • • •

She is too easy and Hollywood is too familiar with her. She finds work difficult to obtain. Then the extra girl gets wise to this town. She tries to redeem herself. She changes her name. She changes the color of her hair. She changes, and she tries to start all over again.

• • • •

Every week, extras come from New York, Chicago, or some village and believe the rules don't apply to them. They learn. I know—for I have seen girls come from the Broadway night clubs and finally consent to adjust themselves.

Many of the extras get ambition. They pledge themselves to get somewhere, to get out of the extra class.

• • • •

Where do they get the money? Hollywood is dotted with numerous bungalows where "Dramatic Instructors" are anxious to make a living. They realize their pupils must come from the ranks. They adjust the prices accordingly. A lesson can be obtained for from $5 to $25 for half an hour.

• • • •

A certain extra girl went to one of these teachers and said: "I haven't any money, but I'm going to get somewhere. I'll pay you back then." The teacher gave the girl a lesson free, believed the extra had ability, and made the deal.

That extra girl is now a featured stock player at Warners. Her name is Marie Wilson.

Often an extra girl, who has been taking lessons, will stop. The teacher will phone her and invite her to return. "I'll trust you until you get another job," the instructor says. These instructors have become judges of character. They aren't often fooled.

• • • •

The extra girl, with ambition, is an animal who hunts. She is always searching for the next job. She knows the secretary of the casting director by her first name; she may even know the casting director by his first name. She phones whenever possible, but tries not to become a pest.

• • • •

On the phone, this is her conversation: "Is there anything going on out there? . . . Will you remember me?" She may only get this answer: "Nothing now. I'll remember you."

The big trick is not to be forgotten, and not to become a pest.

The best call an extra can get from Central Casting or the studio is: "It's extra work—with a possible bit."

A "possible bit" means that the extra may be given a line to speak. If an extra speaks a line—and one word constitutes a line—the extra receives a $25 check for the day.

• • • •

The extras belong to the Screen Actors' Guild—junior members. It costs an extra $10 to join and 25 cents a month. It affords them protection. At least now, when they are summoned for an interview at a studio, the studio must pay their carfare. The amount of the fare depends on the distance to the studio.

The extra must also pay a State tax on his or her pay check. It's 5 cents on $10 and 7 cents on $15.

• • • •

Extras are also typed. Many an extra, who is classified as a $10 extra, will go without work before accepting a $7.50 call. They know how difficult it is to get back into the bigger money division.

Aircraft Trust Charged in Suit Of $90,000,000

Designer Names Principal Builders; Alleges His Ship Was Wrecked.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 12.—Existence of a "corrupt and coliusive arrangement" designed to establish a monopoly in the aircraft industry throughout the United States was charged in a $90,000,000 suit filed in Federal court today by James V. Martin, pioneer airplane designer and manufacturer.

Suing under the Sherman anti-trust act, Martin named 37 corporations, four co-partnerships and their members, and 28 individuals as defendants. Among them was Glenn L. Martin, Baltimore airplane builder, with whom his name is not to be confused.

The plaintiff, who operates an airplane company on Long Island, set forth in his suit that:

"Defendants have willfully and wantonly crippled the national defense by knowingly foisting upon the Government obsolete, unstable, inefficient and unsafe aircraft, aircraft parts and accessories, while throttling the advance and development of aircraft trade industry throughout the United States."

Leading Makers Accused.

Further, he accused the defendants, some of the leading manufacturers and operators of aircraft in the country, of impeding the progress of civil and military aeronautics in the Nation; of refusing to include new safety devices in their aircraft, and of "unduly and unreasonably maintaining the price of aircraft parts and accessories so that travel by air in the United States is not as widespread as it could and should have been.

Martin testified before the House Military Affairs Committee in 1934 that 75 cents out of every dollar spent by the War and Navy Departments for airplanes was "stolen" by what he called the "air trust."

A month later he said in a speech that potential "foreign enemies are watching the air trust graft in America as Japan watched graft in the Czarist Russian army."

In his suit he charged that a bomber he had designed, built and delivered to the Government was maliciously destroyed "so that inferior, unsafe, inefficient, obsolete and unstable bombers of defendants' manufacture should not suffer by unfavorable comparison."

He alleged further that certain of the defendants caused his discharge as an officer of the Navy. Charging he has been damaged to the extent of $30,000,000, he seeks to recover treble that amount under the Sherman act.

Defendants Listed.

Among the defendants are the Aeronautical Corporation of America, American Airlines, Inc., Boeing Aircraft Co., Curtiss-Wright Airplane Co., Douglas Aircraft Co., Eastern Air Transport, Inc., Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Pan-American Airways Corporation, Trans-Continental & Western Air, Inc., United Aircraft Corporation, and four investment and brokerage firms.

An answer to Martin's charges by the Manufacturers Aircraft Association, Inc., one of the defendants, recalled "a suit based on the same general allegations which the same person filed" was dismissed in 1924 in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

"Charges that American aircraft manufacturers have crippled the national defense indicate the absurdity of his complaint," said the association, "as it is well recognized that American aircraft lead the world * * * There is no such thing as an aircraft trust in this country."

Puerto Rican Crash Laid to Zioncheck

San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 12 (AP).—The automobile adventures of honeymooning Representative Marion Zioncheck, of Washington, did not end when he left the territorial United States.

Francisco Rodriguez, a truck driver, asserted today that the Congressman, driving a friend's motor car, had been in a collision with Rodriguez's truck yesterday on a bridge near the town of Rio Grande.

The owner of the car Zioncheck borrowed got it back—with a broken spring, smashed fenders and bumper and minus one headlight.

Meteor Is Reported Found in N. C. Road

Winston-Salem, N. C., May 12 (AP).—A meteor was reported today to have been found 55 miles west of here in Wilkes County.

Charles Mathis, Winston-Salem businessman, said he was told by State highway employes near Roaring River that a meteor struck a sand-clay road there last Tuesday and buried itself about 9 feet. The hole, he said, was reported 5 feet in diameter. The workmen, he said, filled in the hole without attempting to remove the meteor.

The chamber of commerce here informed Harry Davis, curator of the State Museum, of Mathis' report, and Davis said the museum would investigate.

Three Killed in Crash Of Plane in Wisconsin

New Lisbon, Wis., May 12 (AP).—Three persons died in the crash of an airplane in a heavily wooded tract on the Martin Wood farm, three miles from here late yesterday.

Roosevelt, Green Confer on 2 Bills

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor yesterday urged President Roosevelt to use his influence in obtaining passage at this session of the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill and Walsh-Healy measure to provide minimum wage standards in Government contracts.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., said he was impressed with the President's reaction.

The housing bills are pending in Senate and House committees. The Walsh-Healy bill was passed by the Senate last session, but the House Judiciary Committee recently tabled it.

In a formal statement after the White House call, Green said the housing bill should be enacted as "an economic device essential to balance the apparent recovery."

Disabled Ship Sails With Rescue Plane

Boston, May 12 (AP).—The trawler Thomas Whalen started slowly back to Boston tonight carrying the disabled plane which flew to her aid when she became disabled 65 miles northeast of this port.

The plane nosed over and broke its propeller when Pilot Charles Sunderland tried to take off after delivering a new motor part to the vessel. Sunderland went aboard the trawler.

Advised of the accident to the plane by the Thomas Whalen's radio, Coast Guard headquarters dispatched the cutter Harriet Lane and a plane from the Salem air base. The cutter Mojave, inbound from the Grand Banks, also sped to the scene.

Nats Robbed Of Win Over Chicago

3-0 Lead Nullified After Field Is Rendered Unfit for Play.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Chicago, May 12.—The loyal ground crew of Comiskey Park put in an appearance in time's nick this afternoon and rescued the White Sox from impending defeat by the Nats.

It was a fine bit of sabotage that the ground workers committed on the infield sod in the third inning after rain, that had delayed the game, finally vanished before the powerful rays of the afternoon sun.

Washington was enjoying a 3-0 lead in that third inning and two White Sox were already out, when a 10-minute shower caused Hizzoner John Quinn, umpire-in-chief, to call off hostilities temporarily.

Beyond covering the pitcher's mound and the batters' box with skimpy layers of canvas, the loyal White Sox ground crew made no move to insure resumption of the game. The infield tarpaulin lay undisturbed within easy reach and there it remained in the absence of further orders.

Nat Lead "Ploughed Under."

Perfect baseball weather set in 10 minutes later and the infield rivulets were rapidly drying when the groundsmen conceived the brilliant idea of digging up the sod along the base lines in an absurd effort to make the diamond playable.

With rakes, shovels and other assorted tools they set to work as the umpires and Managers Bucky Harris and Jimmy Dykes watched, the one hoping that the field would be restored to a playable condition, and the other praying that the groundsmen would get in some dastardly work that would prevent the resumption of play.

They did. After five minutes, the infield took on the appearance of a haphazardly furrowed plow-field and further play was out of the question. The umpires, who had permitted the wrecking of the diamond under their very eyes, then had no alternative but to call the game off.

De Shong Blanks Sox.

In those three innings that were played, the Nats had smacked the offerings of aged Ted Lyons, their conquror last week, right smartly. They banged out eight solid hits against Lyons while Jimmy De Shong was holding Chicago scoreless with three safeties.

Buddy Lewis was the chief offender against Lyons, driving out singles in his two appearances at bat, but the hits were washed off the record when the game fell two innings short of legality.

Manager Bucky Harris tomorrow will give Jack Russell his second starting assignment on the mound. Russell, who beat the Red Sox in his first outing, will be opposed by Monte Stratton, the rookie right-hander, who beat the Nats last week in Washington.

And over here the champeen is caught in the act of breaking rigid training rules in the company of attractive Miss Mary O'Shea, of New York. Sarron is downing a tall glass of milk, which was a featured article on the little Syrian's diet. Petey advises all youngsters aspiring to be champions to drink plenty of milk and to observe strict training rules.

Chicago, Ill., May 12.

To Mr. Pete Sarron, General Delivery, Washington, D. C.

Dear Champ: I know you were busy the other evening when I dropped into your dressing room to give you the glad mitt after you finished giving Freddie Miller the iron mitt for 15 rounds, but I felt kinda hurt, just the same, when you didn't even say thanks.

POVICH.

And don't ask me, thanks for what. You know what I'm getting at, Pete. Who picked you to lose, I'm asking you? You said that Freddie Miller was going to pin your ears back and otherwise cuff you around out at Griffith Stadium? Who said all those things and more to the effect that you didn't have a chance to win that title?

Who but the guy that picked Brevity to win the Derby, Selassie to outpoint Il Duce and Goliath to decision David? The best break you ever got in your life I gave you when I picked Miller to win. Why, man, you were a sure thing after that. There might have been some doubt about it up to that point when my prediction on the fight appeared in this space last Monday morning, but from then on, you were a cinch.

I'm not trying to take any credit away from you, Pete, you had a part in winning that title, I'm admitting, but I didn't have to pick Miller to win, understand? Anyway, I put the Povich curse on Miller and what appreciation do I get from you? Not a peep. You're in there autographing all those fans' books after the fight and ain't even hep to the fact that I'm around—you ingrate.

All right, Pete, if that's the way you want to act about it. You were one fellow I never thought was a fair-weather guy, but I guess you're all the same. You didn't have to be so uppity, especially with a guy who sent Miller into that ring with two strikes on him, like I did. But there'll be another fight some day and 'twouldn't surprise me if I pick you to win just for meanness. I can be that way, too.

And now, Pete, that I've got that off my chest, I feel better. In fact, I'm sorry I flew off the handle. You and me were always good friends, Pete, and I guess I shouldn't have said what I did. The more I think of the way you waded in there and took what Miller had to offer and then outpunched him, the more I have to hand it to you.

You did a swell job that night, Pete, no kidding. I have never seen you better. Anybody with half an eye could tell that you meant business in there and that you wanted that title bad and just went and took it. They can call you a clown fighter, Pete; perhaps you are with that pinwheel stuff and the punches you throw from those screwy angles, but they can't take results away from you.

And another thing, Pete, I liked the way you finished the champion off. You didn't let the crowd down in those late rounds when you had such a big lead you could have coasted in after the tenth. No, sir, Pete, I saw you in there trying to win the title the hard way, by knocking the champ out. And you almost did it, too, Pete.

As I was saying you could have coasted in and the only way Miller could beat you was by a knockout, but I was glad to see that you didn't go into your shell. You were out there swapping punches with him right up to the finish and getting all the best of it, Pete. And the crowd was getting a great show, thanks to you, Pete.

And another thing: A lot of people, including myself, ought to take back a lot of those things they said about you not being able to hit hard. If some of those things you threw at Miller were cream puffs, Pete, they came out of a brick kiln, no kidding.

Hoyas' Victory Is Clinched by Nicketakis

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Time was bodaciously awastin' yesterday afternoon when Burly Nick Nicketakis, Georgetown's star southpaw, pulled on his shirt, raced out of his physician's office and over to the diamond where the Hoyas were playing Elon. The time was 2:45 o'clock.

Just two hours later time was still awastin' when Nick peeled off his sweat coat, strode out to the mound and retired the last bevy of Elon batters in order to clinch a hard fought and well deserved 3-2 victory for the Hilltoppers. When he finished with the Christians the only thing awastin' was Elon's batting.

Nick arrived at the scene of action to find Big Mike Petroskey doing all right for himself in a pitching way. Big Mike was serving up a combination round-house, sinker and fadeaway that baffled Elon so thoroughly the visitors got only three hits in seven and a fraction innings. But Mike couldn't stand prosperity. He wobbled and finally fell in the seventh with one man out and two runs across.

Arm Felt Right.

Coach Ralph McCarthy ordered Tommy Nolan, handy man of the team, to warm up. Nicketakis, whose arm suddenly went dead about two weeks ago and who hadn't thrown a ball since, got up too. They warmed up together and when Petroskey was summoned to the bench Nolan, and not Petroskey, was told to replace him. But Nick's arm felt right and he wanted a shot at the team that humbled Georgetown in their first meeting. McCarthy immediately became aware of a hunch that wasn't in the shoulders. He played it and it worked. Nick prevented Elon from hunching up further on its host.

The big boy had plenty on the ball and appeared to be in regular stride. He gave Elon the works, everything but a load of buckshot in the south end of their britches, and did it with a couple of major league brush-beaters sitting in the stands.

Bill Newsome, no relation to Washington's pitching pride, was Georgetown's victim yesterday. A crook-arm, speedball hurler, Bill gave up 11 hits, but managed to

Sorrell Blanks Red Sox With Three Hits

Detroit Wins First Game of Series With Boston by 5-0 Score.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 12.—Victor Sorrell held the Boston Red Sox to three hits today as the champion Detroit Tigers repulsed the first Western invasion of Navin Field this season, 5 to 0.

Nominated as a starting hurler only after Gen. Al Crowder was called home by the death of his father, Sorrell held the Sox sluggers helpless until the sixth inning, when Jimmie Foxx touched him for a single with two out. Rick Ferrell's single to start the seventh, and Heine Manush's ninth-inning double were the only other safe hits off the Tiger right-hander.

Browns Blank Yanks, End 13-Game Slump

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 12.—The St. Louis Browns ended their 13-game losing streak here today, shutting out the New York Yankees, 7-0, behind the six-hit pitching of Al Thomas, who until today was not considered good enough to start a game.

Pitching with perfect control, Thomas walked three men, struck out five, and gave the Yanks only four hits in the first eight innings.

In contrast, Pat Malone had a little trouble at the start. He gave up six hits and six runs in the first two innings. Bump Hadley, who replaced him in the second, gave up anfother hit to score one of the men Malone had put on base, but thereafter the Browns could get only three hits.

Firm Would Erect Greyhound Track Near Alexandria

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., May 12.—The Migarlit Enterprises, Inc., operators of dog tracks in Orlando, Fla., and Long Beach, N. J., sought permission from the Alexandria city council tonight to erect a grandstand and greyhound track on Lower road just inside the city limits, near Four Mile Run.

The application was immediately referred to the zoning committee of the council. If no rezoning is necessary, action will be taken at a special meeting on May 19.

Prepared to start work at a moment's notice, the Migarlit Co., through its spokesman, Myer Goldberg, promised to be able to operate the racing plant by July 1. The company also promised to comply with State and city laws, which prohibit pari-mutuel betting and other forms of gambling.

Ross Will Defend Title in Australia

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 12.—Barney Ross, world's welterweight champion, will defend his title in Australia next winter against Jack Carroll, freakish Australian title-holder who is 30, toothless and also tough.

The champion has been guaranteed $45,000, exclusive of income tax, amounting to about $10,000, which the promoters have agreed to pay.

Both Believe Canzoneri Is 'Easy'

Miller Held Weakened by Having to Make 126 Pounds.

By Bill McCormick.

Both the new and the old featherweight champions, it was learned last night, have decided on a new and identical objective, the lightweight title.

Glowing with joy and confidence, Petey Sarron, the conqueror, announced he would seek a bout with Tony Canzoneri, sure after his hour of victory, the lightweight champ would be "easier than Miller."

Somewhat sadder, Freddie Miller, the vanquished, announced through his manager, Pete Reilly, he was no longer able to make the weight without weakening himself, and would like nothing better than a crack at Tony and the title in the heavier class.

In one of a few lucid moments allowed him in the whirl of backslapping, babies to be kissed, and bandages, the new champion authoritatively allowed his belief he was at last getting somewhere in this ring business and thought he had better go out after bigger game while the going out was good.

"Easy For Me."

"I wanna fight this Tony Canzoneri for the lightweight title," he opined, blinking his left optic which was cut in the eighth round of his successful assault on the title. "I have watched Tony fight a good many times and I think he would be easier for me to beat than Miller, because Miller is a southpaw and I had to change my style all around for him."

Sarron believes he could come in at 129 or 130 pounds against the lightweight champion, who would be forced to make 135 pounds for a title bout.

"I always have given away weight," he points out. "Miller is one of the few legitimate featherweights I ever fought. The bigger fellows are easier because they are slower and I am much stronger at those higher weights, even if I do have to give away a few pounds."

Tony "Easy" for Freddie.

Freddie would be willing to take on Tony for a song; in fact—so Pilot Pete said—Miller would almost be willing to put up some of his own cash to get Canzoneri and his lightweight title into the ring.

"Tony is made to order for Freddie," Reilly said. "The right hook is Freddie's best punch—even if he is a southpaw—and he'd hit Tony all night with it."

The new champion has no illusions about the ring game, having knocked about in the racket for more years than most fighters last.

"I've got to make money on this title, and I'm going to make it as quickly as possible," he says. "I'll lay the title on the line every time anybody makes me a respectable offer. I'll fight plenty of feather-

Billy Bee Reads Odds Board, Then Wins Pimlico Feature, 7 to 2

Miss Cyllene Pays $113 For Mark

Longest Mutuel Price of Season Boosts Double to $193.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., May 12.—When the circus comes to town next week we may expect to see one of those side-show signs reading, "Billy Bee, the horse mathematician." Billy Bee is now making a living for the Bomar Stable of Detroit, running and then not running on the Nation's racetracks. He is one of those rare horses that can read the odds board.

On the way to the post today in The Edgar Allan Poe Purse, the feature race, Billy Bee glanced at the figures. Opposite his No. 2 Billy saw 7 to 2 staring him in the face. One look was sufficient. When the break came, he hopped to the front, romped to the wire and then galloped back to the stewards' stand with a grin on his face. He must have had a good chuckle in the barn later when he heard that the lines at the windows were being paid off at the rate of $9.20 for each $2 investment.

Last Thursday, this same Billy Bee was marching toward the starting gates. A bold 3 to 5 was lighted on the board. Billy took a fleeting glance, stuck his nose in the air and then ran behind horses all the way to be beaten in 1:12 4-5. Today he was an easy winner in 1:12 3-5. Last Thursday he carried 119 pounds while today he toted 118 pounds.

On April 29 over the same fast track that he had on the other two occasions, Billy Bee, with Jimmy Bryson, the same rider, stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5, the fastest time of the meeting. He had odds of 9 to 1 to inspire him that day.

Behind Billy Bee today there was a lot of hustling and scuffling, but it amounted to nothing but a battle for second money.

Accolade managed to develop enough momentum to take the place from Trumpery, the favorite. Four others could not reach the money circle, the majority tiring from chasing Billy Bee.

An all-Washington combination provided the longest mutuel price of the spring season in the third race. Miss Cyllene, owned by Mrs. T. J. Donohue, trained by her husband and ridden by Jockey Eddie Smith, all from the Capital, won at a $113.60 mutuel. In addition, Miss Cyllene completed a $193.60 daily double. Miss Cyllene was sired by The Porter, famous horse raised by E. B. McLean, the former Washington publisher.

True Tune Wins First.

True Tune, the property of J. E. Hughes, proved a worthy favorite in the opening dash for juveniles. Eddie DeCamillis did the riding and led from flag fall to finish to easily hold Peggy Shippen and Bergere safe. The daughter of Dis Donc paid a $3.80 mutuel.

For the second day, the steeplechase proved a farce—except to those who had a bet on Dindrillin at a $33.20 mutuel. The Spy was second because he failed to have a mishap and Ice Man was third because there was only one other horse still in the race.

Only four of the ten starters crossed the finish line and horses were falling, running out and losing riders until the race looked like a war. In addition, Meredith, after losing his rider, ran a private race of his own and interfered with those trying to compete. He was the direct cause of Flying Feathers' falling. Among the other casualties were Stir, which took a bad spill; Jackie, which went over on his neck; Syriac, which ran out of the course, and Grainger, which ducked a fence to eliminate himself.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUE TUNE, $3.80, $2.60, $2.30; PEGGY SHIPPEN, $3.50, $2.80; BERGERE, $3.10.

TRUE TUNE found racing room on the inside of PEGGY SHIPPEN to take command after the first sixteenth, drew out into a safe lead, saved ground throughout, but was kept under pressure to the end. PEGGY SHIPPEN had the most speed from the gate, continued steadily when headed, but could not overhaul the winner. BERGERE lacked speed from the barrier, was forced to circle the leaders to gain a contending position and finished well. JUB JUB bettered her position gradually. SWEET DESIRE raced wide all the way. WHITE SWEETS fell back steadily. LADY BRIAR was left at the post.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming; the Green Spring Handicap Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:43. Off at 2:46. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNDRILLIN, $33.20, $14.70, $6.10; THE SPY, $11.40, $7.50; ICE MAN (entry), $5.10.

DUNDRILLIN, well placed from the start, moved into command when FLYING FEATHERS fell at the ninth fence, drew out easily as many of the others met with mishaps, and easily held sway to the end. THE SPY gradually bettered his position disposed of ICE MAN in the final half mile, but could not reach the winner. ICE MAN, always forwardly placed, was tiring at the end while having no excuses. HER EXCELLENCY was always a trailer. MEREDITH lost his rider at the third fence. JACKIE fell at the third. GRAINGER ran out of the course going to the fourth fence. SYRIAC ran out of the course going to the seventh jump when his blinkers slipped over his eyes. He had almost lost his rider when he made a bad landing at the fourth. FLYING FEATHERS fell at the ninth when going strongly in the lead. STIR fell at the twelfth jump.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Old Liner. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:17. Off at 3:24½. Winner, Mrs. T. J. Donohue's b. f. (4), by The Porter—Miss White. Trained by T. J. Donohue. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 1:15 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CYLLENE, $113.60, $30.40, $11.30; NIGHT COURT, $5.70, $4.10; MISS JONES, $4.10.

MISS CYLLENE, always a forward factor, raced NIGHT COURT into submission entering the stretch, drew clear, but was kept under pressure to the finish. NIGHT COURT raced MY SIS into defeat early, took a short lead leaving the backstretch, gave way to the challenge of the winner, but tired to hold MISS JONES safe. The latter was forced to weave between horses to reach a contending position from a slow start. She finished determinedly when clear. STROPHE broke very slowly, gradually bettered her position and finished with good courage. OUR TIME flashed some speed, but tired. DALMATIA stopped. BY SURPRISE could never get up. MY SIS stopped after a half mile.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Manchester. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:57½. Winner, Mrs. T. Stevenson's ch. m. (5), by Chance Play—Go Favour. Trained by F. Gilpin. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14, 1:40 4-5, 1:47 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHASTITY, $8.50, $4.60, $2.80; MASTER LAD, $6.50, $3.40; NAVAL CADET, $2.50.

CHASTITY, rated off the pace of the early leaders, responded well when called upon through the stretch and gradually wore MASTER LAD down under vigorous hand riding. MASTER LAD, always well placed, drew out into a comfortable lead on the final turn, saved ground into the stretch and just failed to last. NAVAL CADET lacked early speed to keep up, gradually bettered his position when he found his stride, but could not menace the first two. DROLL STORY raced in spots and closed well. SPARKY could never enter serious contention. SON OF TROY stopped after showing speed for half mile.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Goughacre. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:23. Off at 4:25½. Winner, C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOBAKHETA, $8.30, $3.00, $2.80; JAMUL, $2.90, $2.70; HAPPY EASTER, $3.60.

JOBAKHETA had speed to take command in the run for the first turn, was rated in front and on the rail until entering the homestretch. He bore out slightly and weaved in front of JAMUL through the final three-sixteenth miles. JAMUL was rated behind the pace of JOBAKHETA down the backstretch, responded well when straightened in the homestretch, but Shelhamer was forced to take up when JOBAKHETA weaved in front of him. He claimed a foul, which was not allowed. HAPPY EASTER moved up quickly when settled in his stride, secured racing room on the inside entering the stretch and closed stoutly. FLAGEOLET lacked early speed while trailing the field, but finished fast through the final five-sixteenths. HELEN BAB flashed some speed, but stopped. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Edgar Allen Poe. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:58½. Winner, Bomar Stable's dk. b. or br. g. (4), by Jean Valjean—Under the Rose. Trained by R. E. Potts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BILLY BEE, $9.20, $4.70, $3.60; ACCOLADE, $4.10, $3.30; TRUMPERY, $2.50.

BILLY BEE, going in his best form, had good speed to take command early, drew out without difficulty and was well in hand at the finish. ACCOLADE gradually bettered his position from a slow start, finished stoutly and just got up to wear TRUMPERY down. The latter raced in closest attendance to BILLY BEE, made repeated but futile efforts to overtake him and was tiring from the effort. ENTHUSIASM raced in spots and finished well. SAILOR BEWARE could not keep up. MY COLIN dropped back steadily after flashing some speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Goughacre. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:23. Off at 5:28. Winner, Mrs. E. L. Bull's br. m. (6), by Westwick—Black Wand. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:14 4-5, 1:43, 1:49 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TULEYRIES WAND, $5.40, $3.70, $2.50; TELL IT, $6.30, $3.90; AUTOWIN, $3.40.

TULEYRIES WAND, always well placed while racing under restraint, responded well when called upon to take a short lead in the stretch, and held TELL IT safe in the drive. TELL IT had nice speed to set the pace, shook off the challenge of STAR QUEEN and fought it out with the winners to the end. AUTOWIN, slow as usual to find his speed, moved up very strong in the final stages and closed fastest of all. MORE PEP raced evenly while having no excuses. GOLDEN PLAY made up some ground. STAR QUEEN stopped. SUN SCOUT was done after six furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. The Country Life. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:56. Off at 6:00. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TACK, $6.40, $4.30, $2.80; CANDLE FLY, $10.80, $5.30; NARISE, $3.10.

TACK, outrun for the first six furlongs, slipped through on the inside leaving the backstretch to reach contention, came around NARISE when straightened into the homestretch, continued strongly in the lead and outstayed CANDLE FLY under a hard drive. Latter, far out of contention in the first seven furlongs, swung to the outside and finished full of run. NARISE crowded over on DIXIE DORA when moving into the lead, saved ground, but faltered in the last furlong. DIXIE DORA, crowded while racing on the inside, had to be eased lightly and weakened slowly. DOCTOR'S GIFT went evenly throughout. OUR SHIP was unable to threaten. GALABANG raced strongly for six furlongs, then stopped when shaken up. AT DUSK had no mishaps.

By Dave Herman.

The qualifying rounds over, the field already selected, 170 golfers today are pointing their guns in the direction of the Baltusrol, N. J., course, where the National Open Championship will be fought over the gruelling 72-hole route June 4, 5 and 6.

In the wake of yesterday's coast-to-coast 36-hole trials held on 28 fronts veteran observers were scratching their collective heads, wondering what happened to such celebrated performers as burly Lawson Little, for two years world's No. 1 amateur until he relinquished his laurels voluntarily in March; Willie MacFarlane, the scholarly Tuckahoe Scot; Johnny Hines, the Long Island flash; George Von Elm, Wild Bill Mehlhorn, George Voight and Leo Diegel, by way of mentioning a few.

Little's failure to qualify at Hartford, Conn., where he went thinking perhaps he was a sure thing to make the grade, wasn't any more alarming than the collapse of MacFarlane, 1925 Open champion, one of the game's big stylists, local pros pointed out yesterday.

Tops as Amateur.

As long as he was an amateur Little was tops, but pro golf is different and difficult, as Sarazen, McLeod and other famous men who have been through the mill said the Californian would discover when he abandoned his amateur status.

Much of his prestige lost, Little probably will attempt to redeem himself in the eyes of his professional pals by playing in the British Open at Holyake June 22-26. He came close to winning it last year, after passing up a shot at the American Open at Oakmont.

For Chick Evans, of Chicago, who won the Open crown 26 years ago, next month's classic will be his last fling in a major tournament, the Associated Press reported yesterday. Evans, one of the best amateurs in his day, a former National Amateur title-holder, qualified at Chicago, only after what he described as an agonizing play-off.

It is interesting to note that only one member of the Walker Cup team which will meet the British at Pine Valley next September will play at Baltusrol. He is Johnny Goodman, the Ohio insurance man, who won one of the two places allotted his section by an eight-stroke margin.

Two youngsters who were left off the Walker Cup team proved their worth by qualifying nicely. Freddie Haas, jr., of New Orleans, quarter-finalist in last year's Amateur, was runner-up in the trials at Cleveland with 142, and Jack Munger was runner-up in the test at Dallas with 144—two brilliant scores.

It remained for an amateur, Sam Perry, of Birmingham, to pace the qualifiers. The little Southern lad had two 69s at Birmingham to top Rod Munday, of Santa Rosa, Calif., by a shot. Munday had 70-69—139 in the San Francisco division.

Cranch-Tyler Wins School Track Title

Doubling the point-score on its nearest rival, Cranch-Tyler School yesterday won the first of eight Department of Playgrounds divisional track and field meets for elementary schools on the Virginia Avenue Playground. Bryan School was second. A field of 250 boys competed.

The first five schools in each event qualified for the city meet to be held June 6, at Central Stadium. The Garfield Playground Division will compete today at 3:30 p. m. Schools entered are Brent, Dent, Van Ness, Amidon, Rosselle, Fairbrother, Greenleaf and Smallwood.

Sarron to Appear At Boys' Club Party

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Representative William B. Barry, of New York; Judge Robert Mattingly, James Colliflower, chairman of the board of trustees of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, and John Remon, chairman of its board of managers, will speak.

TIME OUT!

Peacock Favored Over Field Of 100 in Chevy Chase Golf

Washington's first big amateur golf tournament of the season—the Chevy Chase invitation—opens this morning with a field of more than 100 entered.

Heretofore this historic event, which dates back to the time the immortal Walter Travis won the tournament when he was at the peak of his golfing glory, has had two days of qualifying, but, due to the limited field, only one day will be devoted to the 18-hole medal round.

The honor of teeing off first will go to Leo Cullinane, of Kenwood, and Gardiner D. Meese, of Bannockburn, who hit the fairway—at least they hope to—at approximately 9:10 o'clock.

The District's best simon-pure players will be on parade over this par-69 layout, which is in, perhaps, its greatest shape in years, due in part to the elaborate watering system installed more than a year ago.

Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, paired with Jim Lee, Georgetown University golfer, at 1:10, is another favorite, and always there is Harry Pitt, the Manor Moose, several times winner of the Chevy Chase crown, to be reckoned with.

Of the host club stars, Page Hufty, former North and South amateur champion, appears the most dangerous. Among the junior stars who promise to step into the limelight are Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional, runner-up last year; Charlie Pettijohn, of Georgetown University, who made such a fine showing in the Hillendale Open trials; Bobby Brownell, of Manor, and Harvey Johnson, of Columbia.

Cleveland Objects To Rivals' Attitude Toward John Allen

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 12.—Cyril C. Slapnicka, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, said today he had protested to William Harridge, American League president, "constant heckling" of Pitcher Johnny Allen by rival clubs.

Slapnicka, declined to reveal the text of his letter to Harridge, but he termed other clubs' contentions that Allen is using the outlawed spitball "a premeditated plan on the part of our opponents to destroy Allen's effectiveness."

"Allen has been in the American League for five years," Slapnicka said, "and no one ever charged him with using the spitball.

"Apparently the word got around that Allen's value could be lessened by constant heckling. Hornsby (Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Browns) started the trouble and, of course, Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees was quick to follow suit.

"The umpires innocently have fallen in line with the scheme by yielding to requests that they examine the ball almost every time Allen throws it," the Indians' general manager charged.

Dodgers Trounce Dizzy Dean by 5-2

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 12.—The Brooklyn Dodgers started their first long home stay by clubbing Dizzy Dean for 13 hits here today to beat the league leading Cardinals, 5-2.

Casey Stengel and Leo Durocher bickered at each other across the diamond all afternoon and then settled their differences under the grand stand after the game, Durocher claims Casey hit him with a bat, but Casey says that Leo merely thought it was a bat that hit him. Stengel claims it was just a good old-fashioned right.

Rising Rents In April Lift Cost of Living

New York, May 12.—Although food prices and the cost of sundries remained at the same level in April as in March, and clothing and coal prices declined, total living costs advanced 0.2 per cent because of a substantial rise in rents, according to the results of the regular monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. Living costs in April of this year wer 1.3 per cent higher than a year ago, 17.9 per cent higher than in April, 1933, the low point during the depression, but 14.9 per cent lower than in April, 1929.

Food prices averaged the same in April as in March, but they were 1.3 per cent lower than in April, 1935, and 18.8 per cent lower than in April, 1929. Since the low point of April, 1933, food prices have advanced 36.2 per cent.

Rents rose 1.6 per cent from March to April, continuing their upward trend in evidence since early in 1934. Since April, 1935, rents have increased 10.5 per cent, and since January, 1934, 21.1 per cent. They were, however, still 17.6 per cent below the level of April, 1929.

Clothing prices as a whole declined 0.3 per cent from March to April. While women's clothing prices fell off 0.4 per cent, no change was noted in men's clothing prices. Since April, 1935, clothing prices have decreased 2.1 per cent, and since April, 1929, 25.3 per cent. They are, however, 21.6 per cent above the level of April, 1933.

Coal prices fell 0.9 per cent from March to April, less than the usual seasonal decline. The level of coal prices in April was 2.1 per cent above that of April, 1935, but 6 per cent below that of April, 1929.

The average cost of sundries in April was the same as in March, but .8 per cent higher than in April, 1935, 4.9 per cent higher than in April, 1933, and 5.9 per cent lower than in April, 1929.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 118.6 cents in April, 1936, as compared with 118.9 cents in March, 19936, 120.2 cents in April, 1935, and 100 cents in 1923.

Textile Mill Activity 9% Over Year Ago

New York, May 12.—Textile World's index of textile mill activity for the first quarter of 1936 shows a gain of 9 per cent over that for the corresponding quarter of 1935. Cotton, wool and rayon were all up on last year; silk was the only fiber to show a decreased use for this first quarter.

Several branches of the textile industry are flirting with over-production, with the inevitable weakness resulting in price structures. There are exceptions, but it can be said that textile mill activity thus far this year has been maintained at a higher rate than justified by demand.

New York Central Reports Net Profit

New York, May 12 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad Co. reported today a net income of $115,045 during 1935 compared with a deficit of $7,682,334 in 1934.

Operating revenues were $310,192,979, an increase of $15,108,098, or 5.12 per cent. Revenue freight at 104,482,468 tons increased 4.62 per cent, and freight revenues amounting to $218,260,324 advanced 6.91 per cent in 1935 from 1934. The number of passengers, however, decreased 2.45 per cent to 44,381,459 revenue passengers, but income from that traffic gained .98 of 1 per cent to $55,292,023. Net railway operating income was $36,748,524, an increase of $7,587,595.

Crane Gets Contract For Currency Paper

The Secretary of the Treasury announced yesterday that the Treasury had awarded to Crane and Company, of Dalton, Mass., the lowest bidder, the contract to furnish distinctive paper for printing currency and public debt securities of the United States for the fiscal year 1937.

The Government will pay 37 cents a pound for paper with a 75 per cent linen and 25 per cent cotton content. A total of 825 tons is the estimated requirement for currency.

Big Bank Cuts Personal Loan Rates to 4%

National City Announces Lowest Interest for Small Borrowers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 12.—Money—long available to the large corporate borrower on easy terms—has finally become easy to the man in the street.

The National City Bank of New York announces that interest rates on personal loans will be reduced to 4 per cent per annum, the lowest rate for this type of borrowing that can be had anywhere in the world.

James H. Perkins, chairman of the board of National City, said the cut from the former rate of 6 per cent was due to "the increase in volume that has tended to decrease the cost of handling an individual transaction."

Clerical workers and salesmen, between them accounting for more than one-third of all loans of this type, may now borrow money at rates that a few years ago only the most substantial customers of banks could command. National City has made more than 790,000 loans totaling $243,000,000 in the past eight years, Perkins said. The volume is at a new high. During 1935 more than 160,000 loans were made, involving some $48,000,000—both figures being the largest ever recorded for a single year.

230 Employes.

"The National City personal credit plan was started eight years ago," Mr. Perkins said. "At the very beginning it was stated that the purpose of the plan was 'to round out a comprehensive banking service to all classes.'

"This service has been broadened, and exceptional facilities have been required to provide prompt action. The handling of so many small notes requires specialization. There are 330 employes in this department giving exclusive attention to the applications and the credit needs of some 160,000 active customers, whose borrowings, including FHA loans, at present total more than $48,000,000.

"Also, each customer has an account in which deposits are made 12 times a year during the life of the loan. This maintains the thrift spirit of the borrower and does not develop a debtor attitude. This is one of the most constructive elements of the plan."

$100,000,000 Bills 3.1 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for two series of Treasury bills, to be dated May 13, 1936, which were offered May 8, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

Tenders were invited for the two series to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000 or thereabouts, and $313,548,000 was applied for, of which $110,116,000 was accepted.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stock Tone Weakens Slightly With Dealings in Small Volume; Bonds Firm.

New York, May 12.—Stocks and bonds were a trifle poorer than they were yesterday. Treasury issues stood pat, but the tone in speculative markets weakened. Stocks closed, nevertheless, with a good deal of irregularity in a market which was singularly lacking in either rallies or depressed periods. Turnover in stocks was around 600,000 shares. September wheat dropped half a cent to 84 cents a bushel.

Hope for stock market support is pinned on expectation of increased purchasing power of the public this summer and autumn, and not on inflationary scares, such as that contained in the Frazier-Lemke bill to provide for the liquidation of farm mortgages by means of fiat money. Such a measure might bring the farmers some temporary advantage, but it would be disastrous for the country and even its first tendency to inflate stock prices would be offset by the general feeling of impending ruin.

On the business side the long distance view would be much brighter if more signs of activity in the heavy industries were shown. As it is, the recovery is running highest in consumer goods, and they are promised the bulk of the additional summer spending. That spending is expected to come from two new sources: The soldiers' bonus payment of more than two billions and the farm bonuses, both under the old AAA and the new soil erosion hocus-pocus. Altogether, it is estimated, the farmers between now and election will receive from the Government a billion, in addition to their summer and autumn harvests on all the land they have the energy to work and consider profitable.

Happy Days on Farms.

Pouring out so much money is bound to have a stimulating effect on some industries, although much of it already has been anticipated. The motor industry will get much of it and other goods which people of no or moderate means buy quickly when they suddenly come into a few easy dollars will be sought. Bank debt in many cases no doubt will be repaid, willy-nilly so far as the bonus recipient is concerned. Meanwhile the latest Government estimates of the wheat crop, at well below 500,000,000 bushels, suggest a good income for the wheat farmers and make certain of continued excessively high prices for bread to the consumer, for more grain will need to be imported in the next 12 months.

Foreign exchanges were less excitable, and money markets continued dull. The new and higher 1 per cent rate for call loans now gives every appearance of sticking until it gives way to another increase. The short covering movement which late yesterday pushed the franc above 6.60 cents tapered off and francs fell sharply. They sold below 6.59, but did not reach the point at which gold shipments could be resumed. Futures, which began the day around 40 points discount for 90 days, widened to about 45 points. There was a big slump in guilders, which at one time were off nearly 20 points. Sterling moved as high as $4.98 as the Paris-London cross rate rose from 75.27 francs to 75.56 francs to the pound.

Steel Group Firm.

Steel shares were generally firm on talk of higher steel prices. Steel executives, while refusing to admit that they will take the lead in putting up the price, already amply discussed, agree than an advance would be logical. Otis Steel preferred dropped 14 points on the first sale in several weeks, but the common was steady. United States Steel and Bethlehem moved up a little.

Motor shares were stiffer, Chrysler recovered a point. General Motors edged up a fraction. Rails were firm. Southern Pacific was an exception, falling a point. Standard Oil of New Jersey rose a point and some of the others found slightly higher bids. California was backward. The market was harder for rubbers, tobaccos, metals and utilities. United Fruit led its group with a rise of 2 points. American Can and Continental Can were strong.

Neisner was not disturbed by the unusual action of the directors in taking two strokes on the dividend. Detroit Edison lost 6⅝ points on one sale, sinking to a new low price for the year. Losses ranging from 1 to 3 points were made in American Agricultural Chemical, Byers preferred, Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville preferred, Consolidated Coal preferred, Hershey Chocolate, Ingersoll Rand, Penney and G. C. Murphy. Auburn dropped a few points to a new low.

Banking Position.

The reporting member banks of the Federal Reserve in leading cities in their figures for the week ending May 6 again reflected happenings which occurred mainly in New York City and which were shown in the local banks' statements last week. There was an unusual shifting in deposits between districts. An increase of $102,000,000 in demand deposits in New York and a rise of $22,000,000 in the Minneapolis district were offset by declines of $57,000,000 in Cleveland, $33,000,000 in San Francisco and smaller declines in other areas. There was a rise of $29,000,000 in time deposits, $20,000,000 of which was here. Government securities increased $45,000,000 in the period, $36,000,000 of the gain being New York banks' purchases. The New York banks supplied the $34,000,000 increase in loans made to banks, as well as $3,000,000 of the $5,000,000 increase in real estate loans. Other loans rose $24,000,000 for all banks, the New York banks providing about half. Reserves rose $42,000,000.

Foreign Investment.

The proposed new taxes rather than the fear of repatriation of foreign capital on gold currency devaluation promises to hurt American securities. For some time diligent inquiry as to the probable effects of the taxes on foreigners with money in this market has been made from Canada and Europe, where real concern is felt. The latest official development is the formal objection of the Amsterdam stock exchange to the proposed tax on dividends and interest on American securities held by foreigners. The Dutch don't like the idea of filing income tax returns here, to say nothing of paying the high rates imposed. However, the idea that investors and traders in stock markets dislike the proposed taxes doubtless will bring cheer to that large body of the public which wouldn't mind if stock markets were abolished.

Treasury Loans.

The Treasury is finding the cost lifting a little on its bonus financing preparations. Discount bills to be sold tomorrow, doubling the amount of maturing obligations, will go at a substantially higher rate than that obtained for the previous issue. The credit market does not appear to be tightening, but it is the consensus that money rates have touched their low point, and naturally the higher the public debt rises the less interested the market becomes. One factor which may already have begun to operate is the possibility of a heavy outflow of gold within the next few months. Conceivably that could stiffen a bit the money market.

Personal Loans.

Some of the other banks which operate personal loan departments may follow the lead of the National City Bank and cut their rate for such accommodations to 4 per cent from 6. The rate cutting may influence the personal loan companies with which the commercial banks compete. While a 6 per cent discount on a loan which begins to be repaid a month after it has been made is equivalent to around 11 per cent cost to the borrower, a 4 per cent rate would make a personal loan not much more costly than a commercial loan—or rather what a commercial loan used to be—and the lenders might do an even larger volume of business than they now do.

Two Out of Three.

By rejecting one of the two retiring governors who were nominated independently and one of the new candidates, members of the exchange followed the tradition of granting re-election to governors on the regular slate and at the same time admitted two new board members. Richard Whitney showed his tremendous popularity on the floor by polling one more vote as trustee than Charles R. Gay did as unopposed candidate for president.

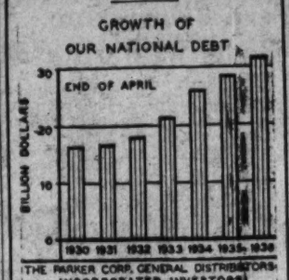
How National Debt Will Not Be Paid Off



Boston, Mass., May 12.—The national debt is $31,500,000,000. The average factory wage earned in this country is about $22 a week. If 5,000 average workers should save all their earnings it would take over 5,000 years to save enough to pay the national debt.

Wheat Off 2 Cents On Crop Outlook

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—Wheat prices fell 2 cents a bushel maximum today responsive to predictions the Government June crop report will show a substantial increase of probable yield.

Despite the fact that a sharp reduction in the May official 1936 harvest estimate was generally conceded to be a surprise, traders paid more heed to the crop board's statement that since May 1 there has been "a very marked improvement" in wheat conditions because of warmer weather and widespread rains over most of the Great Plains area.

Wheat closed weak, ⅝ to 1⅞ under yesterday's finish; May, 92@92⅛; July, 84⅝@84⅞; corn unchanged to ½ lower; May, 62⅝; oats unchanged to ⅜ off, and provisions varrying from 50 cents decline to 7 cents gain.

Devaluation Held Recovery Key for France

Patenotre, American-Born Deputy, Says Gold Nations Lag.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 12.—Raymond Patenotre, one of the leaders of the devaluation movement in the Chamber of Deputies, declared a belief today that France could not make definite strides toward economic recovery until the franc was depreciated.

Asserting the whole world "except the gold bloc" was regaining prosperity rapidly, the American-born deputy said in an interview it was "hard to see" how Leftists plans for a capital levy could put France's internal prices in line with world prices.

He expressed doubt that such a measure would cause wholesale prices to rise to a level in proper relation to retail prices which he said is "essential to bring about a healthy upturn of trade."

"I have, as everyone knows, claimed ever since the depression started that no country could make definite strides toward recovery as long as its currency remained linked to the predepression rate of exchange in regard to gold," Patenotre said.

Predictions Confirmed.

"In the last five years we have witnessed confirmation of these predictions. No notice was ever taken of my warnings and all political parties of France pledged themselves to keep the franc at par with gold.

"But whatever may be my personal outlook, I am ready to give the new government my full support in its great undertaking to restore public confidence and general welfare."

Leon Blum, Socialist leader, awaited replies from the Communist Party and the Labor Federation to his formal invitation to participate in the "people's front" government which he hopes to form after the new Parliament meets June 1.

Financial circles were impressed by the Socialist leader's declarations against experiments with the nation's finances and in favor of gold standard currency. The Bourse reacted favorably to these statements yesterday, with gains noted in Bank of France shares, rentes and other domestic issues.

Favorites Win In Potomac Golf Play

All favorites breezed through the first round of match play yesterday in the East Potomac spring golf championship, with Eddie Stolark, seasoned campaigner, defeating Harold Bowers on the twenty-second hole in the day's feature battle.

In eliminating Bowers, Stolark was forced to overcome a two-hole deficit, winning the seventeenth and eighteenth with par golf in a rousing finish. They halved the next three holes, and on the twenty-second Stolark was down for his par to win the match.

Claude Rippy, District public links champion, and heavy favorite, was around in near par golf while walloping Morris Abrams, an attorney, 7 and 5. Andy Oliveri, chubby faced municipal junior champion; Bob Leapley and Barney Walsh won just as overwhelmingly.

Oliveri trimmed C. Trautner, 7 and 6; Leapley put out Walter Madison, 6 and 4, and Welsh swamped Toby Tyler, 6 and 5.

Little Bobby Bowers, playing the course for the second time this season, took time off from his locker-room duties, and met with a tough defeat at the hands of rugged Gus Kupka, who fired a 73 at Bobby's 75.

keep them pretty well scattered after the second and third innings. But those two innings and the 3 runs they produced were all Georgetown needed with Petroskey and Nicketakis effectively collaborating on the hill.

Georgetown's third and winning run was the direct result of a walk to "Smitty" Nau, followed by Bassin's single and Cavadine's long pop to the outfield.

The Elon boys threatened to prolong matters in its half of the seventh when they suddenly recognized Petroskey and wrung two runs from his offerings. Big Mike stepped into trouble when he walked Borrow and Bullock and pitched a single to Roye. Bullock got home on Fowler's fly to left.

Miller and Sarron Aim for Canzoneri weight matches in between title bouts, and keep in shape that way—not to mention fatten my bankroll."

Hundreds of congratulatory telegrams and scores of offers from promoters all over the world started pouring in on Pete a few minutes after he had punched Miller out from under his laurels.

One of the first to make him an offer was Jimmy Johnston, promoter at Madison Square Garden, who by telephone sought the consent of his manager, Jimmy Erwin, to a series of bouts in the big New York punch bowl.

Dick Griffin, Texas promoter, has asked Sarron to fight in a bout for the Texas Centennial. Lou Raymond, now operating in St. Louis, wants the titleholder for a bout against Young Rightmire in his territory. Mexico is after his services, as is practically every State in the South.

Fetes Are Planned.

The mad whirl of activity for the new ruler of the 126-pound division will continue at full speed for at least a week. Today, Sarron will be a guest at a luncheon to be given in his honor at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria, his present residence. The titleholder will be presented with a brand new set of fishing tackle, and his manager will be given an overnight bag—probably as a tip that he will be kept pretty busy hopping about with his boy from now on.

Tomorrow Birmingham will welcome Pete, a native of that city. He will fly to his Alabama birthplace, where he will be given the keys to the city and banqueted almost into the welterweight division.

Sarron will fly back to the Capital to be the guest of honor at a banquet given by the Alabama State Society at the Willard Hotel Saturday night. After that, other things for him to do will pop up.

His cut left eye, which was injured when he rammed it into Miller's knee while ducking a left hand, will be two or three weeks in healing after, which Pete will resume training for his money-making campaign.

Miller, who released a great deal of pent-up emotion in a healthy cry after the Monday set back, felt pretty good yesterday as he spent most of the day on the links.

"Sarron is a very good boy," Reilly admitted, viewing the fight in retrospect, "but making that weight hampered Freddie no end. He walked I don't know how many miles to whittle off a few extra pounds and as a result he couldn't keep coming to Sarron as he had in Miami."

Maryland Show Draws Capital Winner

Galliher's Horse Entered in Exhibition Set for Saturday.

Applejack, the enormous brown gelding crowned king of the open jumpers at the National Capital three days ago, will search for additional laurels in the University of Maryland Horse Show Saturday in Byrd Stadium at College Park.

C. Emery Galliher, Washington sportsman, who has enjoyed remarkable success with his towering lepper, informed Fred J. Hughes, jr., sophomore chairman of the show committee, last night that his sensational 9-year-old performer will be shown at the Maryland meet.

Applejack won the tri-color rosette emblematic of the open jumping title at the National Capital on Sunday afternoon when he concluded a string of brilliant victories by besting Firenze Gaylady from the barn of Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim in a jump off for the championship after they had both tied for first place with 14 points.

The 18-class program is expected to draw more than 100 other hunters, saddle horses and open jumpers, including a number of crack jumpers from the string of the Fort Myer Horse Show team, Chairman Hughes said.

More than $500 in trophies will be presented in the show, which is the first open event of its kind to be staged at the college, those in 1934 and 1935 having been restricted to students of the institution. It gives promise, however, being one of the most colorful in the Washington sector this season.

Curb Is Irregular In Dull Trading

New York, May 12 (AP).—Industrial specialties and a few metal stocks were in demand at slightly advanced prices in the curb market today. Other groups, especially oils were backward. Trading was lifeless, sales totalling 167,000 shares compared with 156,000 in the previous session.

Issues gaining minor fractions to 2 points included Aluminum Co., International Petroleum, Newmont Mining, Pan-American Airways, Pioneer Gold, Sunshine and Wright Hargreaves. Pittsburgh Plate Glass turned in the brightest performance with a 2¾ point gain at 122¾.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 12.—Trading in the stock market was subdued today owing to the continental outlook and easier overnight Wall Street news. Speculative profit-taking caused an easing in gold mining shares and transatlantic issues, while gilt-edged securities drooped owing to a slackening in support. Oils and industrials hardened in the afternoon. The closing tone was irregular.

Paris—French securities fluctuated irregularly in the bourse. Rentes held steady and bank shares were firm, but coal, metal and chemical issues declined. With the exception of Egyptian shares, international stocks likewise sagged and the market closed irregular.

Liverpool—Wheat futures were higher early in the day on the bullish United States Government crop report, but eased later on a decided increase in Canadian offers and poor milling demand. Cotton futures closed 1 to 3 points higher on trade calling in near positions and Bombay buying of later options.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A demand for the pound sterling, attributed in foreign exchange circles to continued uncertainty over the outlook for the French franc, was the high point in currency trading yesterday.

In New York the pound rose 1¼ cents to 14.97½. This compared with an earlier close for the dollar in London at 4.87¼ to the pound.

The French franc in New York came under some pressure and declined .00¾ of a cent to 6.59¼ cents. Earlier transactions in Paris saw the dollar finish at the equivalent of 6.592 cents to the franc.

The Dutch guilder, which with the French franc is hitched to gold, was down .15 of a cent to 67.80 cents in New York. Swiss francs, the third major gold bloc currency, were down .03 of a cent to 32.35 cents in New York dealings.

Farm Mortgage Vote Expected In House Today

Backers Confident as Bill Is Debated; Lemke Claims Victory.

Exuding confidence after their success in forcing the bill from committee, House backers of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill yesterday opened debate on the measure with heated arguments that the measure is not inflationary, and heard counter assertions that it is unjust and "iniquitous."

Debate on the scheme occupied nearly four of the six hours allowed by the rule, and last night the steering committee met to map strategy for pushing it through to final passage today.

Democratic leaders, including Speaker Byrns, Majority Leader Bankhead, and Democratic Whip Patrick Boland made known their belief that the bill would be defeated, but Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee was not so sure. He offered to bet that the House would pass the bill. Representative Lemke (Republican) of North Dakota, author of the measure, was willing to offer 2 to 1 his bill would be adopted.

Lemke opened the debate with the assertion that "this bill is not inflation unless every Federal Reserve bank note is inflation."

He explained that his measure would authorize the issuance of Government tax-exempt bonds to refinance farm debts at 1½ per cent interest over a 47-year period. If the bonds could not be sold, Federal Reserve notes up to $3,000,000,000 would be issued. They would be secured by the value of the farms, the measure now provides; but Lemke told the House he would offer an amendment to back the notes up to 20 per cent with free gold in the Treasury.

Bill Backed, Criticized.

Democrats and Republicans alike then took up the offensive. Representative Feisinger (Democrat) of Ohio, termed the bill "iniquitous." He said its enactment would bring on a dictatorship.

"If inflation came," he declared, "we could have a collapse more serious than the depression and then chaos, followed by a changed form of society and government."

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican) of New York, said he approved of the bill's objectives to bring farm relief. "But I cannot vote for it," he said, "because I am just as opposed to inflation as I am in favor of farm relief."

Representative Goldsborough (Democrat) of Maryland, acting chairman of the Banking Committee, declared the bill would not endanger the credit structure, and he scoffed at the inflation arguments.

Representatives David J. Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland, and Daniel A. Reed (Republican), of New York, made pleas against the bill.

"Nothing but misery came from the currency inflation of Germany, France, Italy, and Austria," Lewis said.

Vote Expected Today.

When the remaining time for debate is concluded early this afternoon, the measure will be open for amendments under the five minute rule.

Lemke declared the Farm Credit Administration had been unfair in issuing a brochure opposing his bill, while at the same time he said its officials had refused to testify before the House Agriculture Committee either for or against the measure.

The analysis by the Farm Credit Administration said the cost of credit to the farmer would exceed 1½ per cent because administration costs would add at least 1 per cent annually.

Lempke replied that his bill contemplated nothing more than what Federal Reserve Banks already are permitted to do, "except that they are doing it for the international bankers and a handful of individuals."

A final vote on the measure is expected shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon. Majority Whip Boland announced the House would be held in session until the bill is finally disposed of.

Term Shortened, Landreau Freed

Norman B. Landreau, a prominent member of the District bar for 15 years, is at liberty after serving a year and seven months in the District Jail on embezzlement charges. His sentence of from two to four years was commuted by President Roosevelt.

Landreau, on October 24, 1934, pleaded guilty to embezzling money from the estates of Walter R. Marsh and Vincent L. McCarthy, insane asylum inmates for whom he had been appointed a "committee." Landreau told Justice Oscar R. Luhring he used the money for "speculation."

Once Landreau had been convicted of the felony, he automatically was disbarred as an attorney.

He achieved his first fame as a criminal lawyer with the defense that his client had been hypnotized into committing murder.

Unusually successful as the attorney for the defense, he appeared in many of the most famous trials of modern French legal history and was elected president of the order of French advocates.

Cashier of Store Is Rewarded For Returning $1,350 to Owner

Envelope Containing Money Kicked Around Sidewalk for an Hour; G. O. P. Committeewoman Lost Money on Way to Bank.

A leisurely trip abroad, an expensive automobile, a sizeable nest egg for a rainy day—any one of these literally lay at the feet of a Washington cashier, but she chose rather to return the $1,350 she found to its owner.

A "large cash reward" was presented to Miss Wootie C. Bennett by Mrs. Virginia White Speel yesterday, when the latter, who is Republican national committeewoman for the District, went to Lansburgh's department store to claim the cash contents of an envelope she had lost the previous day.

She was returning to the store from lunch Monday when, on the sidewalk near the Eighth and D street entrance, she noticed an envelope that had once been white but which was now soiled and covered with heel prints. She picked it up and, noting it was sealed and had a bulge, she waited a few minutes for the owner to appear.

Returning to her cashier's cage, Miss Bennett opened the envelope and extracted a small fortune in currency. She immediately communicated with the Second National Bank, whose name appeared on the letterhead.

The bank notified Mrs. Speel of the good news and the committeewoman went to Lansburg's yesterday morning to get the money. She estimated that the enevelope, which she was taking to the Second National Bank for deposit, must have lain on the sidewalk about an hour before it was recovered.

Mrs. Speel lost the money while en route from her home at 1316 New Hampshire avenue to the bank.

Garey Removal As Police Head Asked of Nice

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 12.—A special board of inquiry, charging the death of a State police sergeant to "unwise and unsound decisions," recommended today that Maj. Enoch B. Garey be replaced as superintendent of Maryland State police.

The recommendation was directed to Gov. Nice, who named the board. The Governor said he would make no comment until he returns from a vacation, June 1.

Maj. Garey led the Tangier Island, Virginia, relief expedition of last February 5. Sergt. Wilbert V. Hunter, his clothes frozen after he fell through the ice while with the relief party, died in a blizzard on the ice off Crisfield.

The entire membership of the board—Adjt. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Alexander Armstrong, Col. Harry C. Jones and Dr. Dwight H. Mohr—signed this conclusion:

Decisions Assailed.

"We have tried to view this entire situation from the standpoint of the conditions which faced Maj. Garey at the time each of his decisions was made. We have endeavored to reach an appreciation of the influences which operated upon him in the formation of his different judgments, but we did not believe that his decisions would have been the decisions of any reasonable, careful leader, having a proper and just regard for the safety of the men entrusted to his care. We are fully conscious of the high purpose which animated Maj. Garey in pressing on towards the Travis (a Coast Guard cutter), but we do not feel that any leader is justified in unduly exposing himself and those for whom he is responsible, to the risks of death or serious bodily harm, in behalf of others whose lives at the time are in no serious peril.

"We therefore conclude, that in the final analysis, the death of Sergt. Hunter is attributable not only to the unwise and unsound decisions of Maj. Garey in planning his relief project, but also to his continued indifferences to the warnings of danger which everywhere surrounded him, and to his steadfast refusal to be governed by them in forming such judgments as became necessary after the expedition had started."

Permitted to Resign.

Reckord, Jones and Mohr recommended to the Governor that Garey be permitted to resign or that he be removed if he fails to resign. Armstrong declined to make any recommendation.

Maj. Garey declined to comment.

The board listed nine findings of fact. They were:

1. That there was no desperate shortage of food on Tangier Island at the time.

2. That Garey himself was convinced there was such a shortage as a result of conferences with island officials.

3. That the supplies carried by the ill-fated expedition were not relief supplies for general distribution, but were goods sold by O. L. Tawes & Co., Crisfield wholesale grocers, "presumably at a profit, in the regular course of business."

4. That Maj. Garey was "unquestionably the leader of the relief expedition."

5. That Maj. Garey "demonstrated that he was a man of physical strength and endurance, great energy and genuine courage. He was nearly always in the lead. He never requested the men to engage in any undertaking in which he, himself, was unwilling to participate. He bore the rigors of the trip unflinchingly and without complaint. We have only words of praise for these qualities of high spirited, courageous manhood which Maj. Garey demonstrated.

6. That it is no part of the official duties of the Maryland State Police force to deliver food supplies, even to the citizens of Maryland, unless upon direction to do so by the Governor. There is certainly no official obligation resting in the Maryland police to bring relief to the citizens of an adjoining State.

Poor Judgment.

7. That Maj. Garey's judgment was not the judgment which would have been exercised under similar conditions by any reasonably prudent and careful man holding a position of responsible leadership.

8—That the board feels Norris L. Betts, employe of the grocery company, was the only member of the expedition to go voluntarily.

9—That had it not been for prompt rescue work by men sent from the cutter Travis others of the relief expedition would have died.

Under point 7, charging that Garey did not use proper judgment, the board listed:

That Garey did not try to get food to the island by other methods—boat, airplane or the cutter Travis.

That the weather was much too bad to permit the trip.

That the relief party was poorly organized, as it did not include men who knew local conditions.

That Garey was warned of the danger, but disregarded the warnings.

That the expedition ran into serious difficulties soon after starting.

That it should have turned back to the mainland.

The board held long hearings, both in Baltimore and in Crisfield. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, counsel for Maj. Garey, presented a summation of the evidence following the hearings.

Ingersoll, Leary Head Divisions Of Naval Office

Rear Admiral Rank Given Washington Natives in Promotions.

Capt. Royal E. Ingersoll and Capt. Herbert F. Leary, both natives of Washington, were promoted yesterday to rear admiral rank to head the war plan and fleet training divisions, respectively, in the office of the chief of naval operations.

A delegate to the recent London Naval Conference and now on duty in the war plans division, Capt. Ingersoll relieves Rear Admiral William S. Pye, who is to become assistant chief of naval operations about June 1.

Capt. Leary succeeds Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, who has been ordered to command Battleship Division 1 of the Battle Force. Born in this city 51 years ago, Capt. Leary will be the youngest rear admiral in the Navy.

The son of the late Rear Admiral Royal Rodney Ingersoll, Capt. Ingersoll was destined virtually from birth for a career in the Navy. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1905 at the age of 22.

He was awarded the Navy Cross for his work during the war in organizing, developing and administering the communications office of the Department. In 1919 he was ordered to the U. S. S. Connecticut as executive officer, the following year being transferred to the U. S. S. Arizona.

From June, 1921, until March, 1924, he was attached to the office of naval intelligence, leaving that post to assume command of the U. S. S. Nokomis, the Naval survey ship. He served as assistant chief of staff of the commander of the battle fleet from 1928 to 1929, when he became assistant to the chief of staff of the commander in chief.

Like Capt. Ingersoll, Capt. Leary received a Navy Cross for his work during the war, serving as force gunnery officer on the staff of the commander battleship force 1. He also was decorated with the French Legion of Honor. After the war he was a member of the Armistice Commission which inspected German bases and ships.

After two years as fleet gunnery officer on the staff of the commander in chief, in 1924, he was appointed assistant naval attache at the American Embassy in London, with additional duty in Paris, Rome, The Hague and Berlin.

From 1928 to 1931 he was in charge of the Naval Proving Grounds at Dahlgren, Va., and the Naval Powder Factory at Indianhead, Md. In June, 1934, he was made chief of staff of the commander destroyers, a post he held until last summer, when he was assigned to the fleet training division.

Funeral services for Mrs. Manno Welsh Boyd, wife of Capt. Kenneth J. Boyd, of the 312th Engineers, Organized Reserves, who died in Tallahassee, Fla., Sunday, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. Chaplain Ralph C. Deibert will officiate.

Virginia Boy Wins Oratorical Contest

Young Breeden defeated Glaston Hathaway, 14, of Washington, and Charles Muller, 14, of Baltimore, for the Fort Worth trip. All three took as their subjects the value of an optimistic outlook on life. At Fort Worth, Breeden will compete for oratorical honors with representatives from all over the United States and Canada.

Walter J. Pray, of Indianapolis president of the international club, addressed the district convention at a Hotel Mayflower luncheon, reviewing the organization's attainments and appealing for world peace. R. J. A. Kaemmerer, district governor, and Capt. A. E. Nesbitt, president of the local club, presided.

Theodore F. Whitmarsh Dies at 67 in New York

New York, May 12 (AP).—Theodore Francis Whitmarsh, 67, who was at one time Federal food administrator during the World War, died today.

He was chairman of the board of Francis H. Leggett & Co., wholesale grocery and food manufacturing concern, and a director of the Irving Trust Co. Formerly he was a director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Ohio Voters Go to Polls

State has no provision for counting them.

Leo J. Chasse, of Milwaukee, Borah's only opponent on the Republican preferential ballot, received only a few scattered votes. The same was true of Joseph A. Coutremarsh, New Hampshire, only formal opponent of President Roosevelt on the Democratic ballot.

From all over the State came reports that the Democratic balloting was heavier due largely to the Holt-Neely feud and the battle for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Thirteen precincts reported in that race placed Attorney General Homer A. Holt in the lead. Holt, backed by Gov. H. G. Kump, had 1,284 votes. L. R. Via, Huntington attorney, supported by Bittner, had 391.

Hugh Ike Shot, Bluefield publisher, took an early lead in the Republican Senatorial race. He had 609 votes in 10 precincts; Judge Frank Nesbitt, of Wheeling, had 73, and Claude L. Smith, of St. Albans, 42.

For the Republican nomination for Governor the vote in 11 precincts gave Judge Summers Sharp, of Marlington, 585; Judge Lewis Miller, of Ripley, 203; Chapman Revercomb, of Charleston, 81, and W. C. Grimes, of Wheeling, 10.

Counting boards throughout the State were swamped in trying to tabulate the vote of the longest ballot in State history.

Besides the 515 persons seeking nominations for State and national office, there were 10,000 others running for county and district nominations.

Long's Ex-Aid to Run.

Little Rock, Ark., May 12 (AP).—W. F. Denman, of Prescott, former law partner of the late Senator Huey P. Long, today announced his candidacy for the Senate seat now held by the Democratic majority leader, Joe T. Robinson.

Denman said he would open campaign headquarters in a Little Rock hotel within the next few days and wage a vigorous campaign throughout the State.

The candidate, fifth to enter the race, is 45 years old.

Other candidates for the seat Robinson will seek again, are J. Rosser Venable, of Camden; Cleveland Holland, of Fort Smith, and Thornesberry A. Gray, of Batesville.

Uninstructed In Wyoming.

Casper, Wyo., May 12 (AP).—Wyoming's delegates to the Republican National Convention will go uninstructed, with sentiment expressed for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, and the Democratic delegates wil lfavor the renomination of President Roosevelt.

An unofficial poll of the G. O. P. convention, conducted by Frank Horton, former State Senator, and Earle Reid showed the following votes: Landon, 199; Col. Frank Knox, 23; Senator Arthur Vandenburg, 21; Senator William E. Borah, 20, and Senator Frederick Steiwer, 2.

The convention adopted a resolution declaring the poll should be advisory and not binding on the six Republican delegates, who will have a full vote each at the National Convention.

The 12 Democratic delegates will have a half vote each.

Sholtz Seeks Senate Seat.

Tallahassee, Fla., May 12 (U.P.).—Gov. Dave Sholtz of Florida tonight entered as a candidate for the United States Senate to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Park A. Trammell, who died in Washington last Friday.

Sholtz said he would not make a short-term appointment to fill the vacany caused by Trammell's death, for at least a week or ten days. The appointee will serve until Trammels' successor is elected.

Robert J. Boone, Miami attorney, and Claude Pepper, Tallahassee attorney who was defeated by Trammell in a hot campaign in 1934, previously had announced their intention of seeking the office.

Attacks Roosevelt.

New York, May 12 (AP).—Col. Henry Breckinridge, who has opposed President Roosevelt in primaries in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Ohio, said in a statement today it was "not very sporting" of the President not to have entered the New Jersey primary next week. Breckinridge has entered the primary.

"In Georgia," his statement said, "where the Literary Digest poll showed him to be in favor, friends collect the necessary $10,000 fee and file his name. New Jersey, where the Literary Digest poll shows a huge preponderance of sentiment running against the so-called New Deal, is passed by. This may be sly politics, but sly politics cannot meet for long the needs of the Nation."

Party Split In Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., May 12 (AP).—A renewal of Horner-Kelly feud in the Democratic party today split the State Central committee at its organization meeting.

Fifteen of its 25 members bolted the session when Bruce Campbell, who supported Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, against Gov. Henry Horner in the recent gubernatorial primary campaign, shut off further nominations for State chairman after his own name was presented. Bundesen, who had the aid of Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and National Committeeman Patrick Nash in his campaign, was defeated by Horner.

The bolters, headed by Daniel Sullivan of Chicago, the governor's administrative auditor, then set up their own downstate campaign group with Horner's approval.

"This has divided the interests of the party and cost us a lot of votes," Charles V. O'Hern of Peoria declared as the downstaters departed.

Doctors Laud Landon.

Kansas City, May 12 (AP).—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas drew cheers tonight from the American Medical Association with the assertion "Medicine will not willingly be made the servile instrument of politicians or the instrument of a domineering bureaucracy."

Praising the individualistic, personal contact character of medical practice, Landon predicted "with entire assurance that the typical American physician and organized medicine as a whole will at no time be ready for any scheme of regimentation."

He told the physicians "any system of impersonalized medicine" is alien "to the best traditions of the American practitioner."

"The American physician will not be a party to destruction of that individual, personal service which has been the occasion of a special and a justified pride," he said.

Knox Assails Roosevelt.

Tacoma, Wash., May 12 (AP).—Asserting Republican principles are necessary to protect the United States against "the coercive system," Col. Frank Knox, Republican Presidential aspirant, tonight charged President Roosevelt with "reckless expenditures," "despicable deceit" and "legalizing monopolies" in a speech prepared for delivery here.

"One may judge a man's trustworthiness not by what he says alone," Knox stated, "but how his subsequent acts conform to what he has said. It must be by this acid test that America will determine the fitness of Franklin Delano Roosevelt for a second term as President."

The Chicago publisher pointed specifically to Democratic planks calling for reduction of Government expenses and an annually balanced Federal budget. Quoting fro mRoosevelt's campaign speeches to show he had subscribed to these promises, Knox asserted:

"To attempt to lull the people into a false sense of immunity from future tax burdens by a demogogic assumption that only the rich pay taxes is a form of deceit too despicable to describe in temperate language."

Jewish Appeal To Close Today
